Account of the Gods - January 31, 2018, 11:00 am

I gave up on gaming 2-3 yrs ago and been productive since that.

But I am a complete rockstar in league of legends (easily diamond 1) and i wanna play. I played this game 7yrs.

But I know I will regret if I play it more.

But It has incredible dynamics... I wanna play it

Eagle 95 - January 31, 2018, 11:42 am

If it's done in moderation, I don't see a problem. If you go through the roof with like 6+ hours, then... you have a problem.

Leimone - January 31, 2018, 11:43 am

Yes they do.

Just about any person I've spoken to that has have "top job" loves games. Some of them have addictive personalities and don't play them because they're too addictive, while some of them loves them but understand what moderation is.

Ultras - January 31, 2018, 11:46 am

Of course, they just don't let it get in the way of their work or social life.

Earnar - January 31, 2018, 11:59 am

There's a difference between playing games and letting games consume your life. Almost everybody plays games, whether it be video games, board games, or athletic games. Not to mention, many people are successful BECAUSE they play games.

Xerotic - January 31, 2018, 12:06 pm

Of course. Plenty of rich/famous people video games. It is relaxing for a lot of people.

Very hot pfp Eagle

Grim - January 31, 2018, 12:13 pm

Younger ones do. Older ones like CEO's probably not i would guess

Pasific - January 31, 2018, 12:19 pm

Post malone is a pretty diehard gamer, and I think you could say he's pretty successful

Saltpeter - January 31, 2018, 12:29 pm

Your inability to not allow yourself to play for 6+ hours a day has no bearing on the ability of others to do so. Many successful people play video games as a way to relax, just like how others consume different types of media to do the same.

[BLANK] - January 31, 2018, 12:35 pm

I get around 3 hours of gaming in a week. Sometimes I regret it though. There is always something else I could be doing to improve myself.

User1999 - January 31, 2018, 12:59 pm

I used to LOVE games. I would spend hours on the 360 but then the Xbox one came out and I was disappointed. Kinda still am. Last year game wise was horrible for the console.

I don't see anything wrong with it though. A lot of successful people like to watch sports. If it's something you enjoy then go for it.

Mr. Robot - January 31, 2018, 1:08 pm

Success comes in many forms but if you're talking about overall - all round the board people play games.

The Slotfather - January 31, 2018, 5:08 pm

I was really successful at the game and I started earning money from it, then I became successful at life too. Hard work pays ;)

Zexo - January 31, 2018, 5:11 pm

Ya lol tons. My dad owns his own company and plays cs go daily.

Sheeple - January 31, 2018, 5:14 pm

A question shouldn't be asked in the form "Do rich/successful/smart people do X"

How about, "I love LoL, how can I manage being a fucking god at LoL and still work"

Donald Trump Jr. - January 31, 2018, 5:16 pm

Moderation for everything, just play a game or so at night to unwind and relax.

Biggy - January 31, 2018, 5:21 pm

I'm sure they do. It's normal for people to enjoy video games, no matter who you are. You can still be a successful person and have fun at the same time, in moderation.

VoldfarleyY - January 31, 2018, 5:23 pm

Obviously there are some people who are succesful who play games, but I do think that overall it's has a negative effect on succes.

Xycon - January 31, 2018, 5:30 pm

One could make the case that its all that successful people do.

Skidy - January 31, 2018, 5:49 pm

Elon musk plays Call of Duty... So, yeah

Private Sector - January 31, 2018, 9:45 pm

Basically, just find a happy medium. Don't OD on games like most of us, good luck.

Plague - January 31, 2018, 9:49 pm

Sure, depends what type of game though. If you don't play the game enough because you want to balance out your time, you will probably not be that good at the game you're playing. If you're not good, I don't see how it's any fun playing.

Bluffer - January 31, 2018, 9:57 pm

Sure they do but if they are successful they probably have very busy schedules.

They might still game just not as much as they previously did.

Danktober - January 31, 2018, 10:02 pm

I mean i'm not into serious gaming at all, but ill play a game with a homie on 2K or Madden ever once in awhile.

this is funny how addicted to league of legends I am. i could play whole days on coffee+energetics+chocolate sweets.

id sometimes win nearly 1vs5 and get complemented by both teams. id get complemented every game I play, Id always win my lane and lead my team.

Iwas accussed of cheating milion times

the only reason I am not somewhere playing for money is probably because I never play more than 2 champions and because I lost my nerves and flamed hard when someone behaved like troll or idiot which caused me bans on numerous plat,gold and diamond accs, so I gave up to save my life

grady - March 16, 2018, 2:57 pm

people who already made it have the luxury of not being productive
if you want to be successful you'll need some discipline famerino

that's not saying you CANT PLAY GAMES and you always have to be working, but being able to cut out game time and do something productive instaed is something everyone should work on

Ninja - March 16, 2018, 3:08 pm

Hard to say for me personally.

I play a games whenever I got the chance (max 1-2hrs during week) and since I haven't taken any important exams in my life yet it's hard to tell....

A lot of recent celebrities play video games, especially since we're moving towards platforms like YouTube over regular TV.

PerfectStorm - March 16, 2018, 4:32 pm

Of course, they are more likely to have the games and equipment since the cost is insignificant, I would think.

SIM-403479 - March 16, 2018, 4:44 pm

Yeah of course. Take Drake as an example.

Ninja - March 16, 2018, 5:54 pm

There's absolutely nothing wrong with gaming. Lots of people successful or not do enjoy playing games. Maybe even Bill Gates plays.

CYB3RM4N - March 16, 2018, 7:36 pm

Gaming, like anything else, if done in moderation, is good for you.

Also, there are many celebrities that game. Off the top of my head, they are: Drake, Post Malone, Elon Musk, Mila Kunis, Justin Bieber, Henry Cavill, Eminem, Snoop Dogg.

iNviZ - March 16, 2018, 8:53 pm

AU Subi - March 17, 2018, 3:19 pm

Unless recreational activities directly contribute to achieving your goal in a more efficient manner than another task would, they are a 'waste of time' in the life achievement sense, which is what most people are after in some shape or form. How often you can play games is dependent on your personal goals and deadlines for them. If you want to build a seven-figure company in 2 years, build & maintain an elaborate social circle, and get a shredded body, you might have a couple hours a week for games if you're lucky. Anyone who says otherwise is immature and delusional. Part of deciding what you're going to be in life is realizing that you must trade certain areas of life for others depending on your goals. So, maybe you could build a six figure company, have a nice social circle, sacrifice going to the gym but have time to play games daily. Or, you could just work the nightshift at a gas station in a small town with 1 or 2 customers a night, bring your laptop and play games, live with a roommate or two, and you'd be able to play games 14 hours a day. What makes you happy is entirely up to you. The only time it becomes a problem is when you play 6 hours a day of video games and complain about not making six figures or getting laid. In that case, you are a fucking moron
