Thread: 2nd Largest XRB Exchange Hacked... Bye bye 17M Nano.

Ninetales. - February 9, 2018, 2:56 pm

Quote:Important notice Bitgrail S.r.l. Informs its users that internal checks revealed unauthorized transactions which led to a 17 million Nano shortfall, an amount forming part of the wallet managed by Bitgrail S.r.l.

Today a charge about those fraudulent activities has been submitted to the competent authorities and now is under police investigation.

We inform you that the other currencies have not been involved.

In order to conduct further verifications, all the activities will be temporarily suspended (including withdrawals and deposits). This procedure is indispensable for users security.

We do offer our full and sincerest apologies to our customers and to whom has been involved into the illegal transfers of Nano occurred on our platform.

Other announcements will be released shortly.

Thank you for your attention. <https://bitgrail.com/news>

RIP my 200 XRB. I am kicking my foot. Fuck, fuck fuck fuck, fuck fuck.

Damn, wasn't expecting Bitgrail to be on the list of the attacked exchanges so soon. This raises concerns regarding big exchanges like Binance. What stops it to have the same destiny?

Unfortunately, I think it may be in part due to Bomber's (BG CEO) incompetence. It appears that the Nano was actually stolen MONTHS ago, and we are just hearing about it now.

I'm recording a video to compile what we know so far. Fuck, this sucks.

People have been warning each other for years to not keep large sum of crypto on exchange.

Didn't Bomber wanted to fork Nano to rollback the damage?

I only lost about 7 nano but I did buy at all time high of 35$. I hope they find this prick, I couldn't even withdraw due to bitgrail verification taking weeks.

Lmao this idea of forks to rollback is one of the worst ideas in crypto

Anyone else thinking it might be a good price to buy?

FaberCastell - February 11, 2018, 4:48 am

Nano was at 2M market cap a couple of months back.

Not sure how could it be a good buy.
