Thread: Pruning Posts

Omniscient - March 4, 2018, 3:26 pm

We have 8 million posts in the Lounge. That's about 20% of all HF posts. I plan to delete at least 6 million of them in the near future. This will be based on age so don't worry about your new LoungeHead award stats. This won't effect that.

The reason this will be done is because our posts table is not manageable at this size under our current server resources. Eventually I may get another server but that's a ton of work and even before doing that the DB size should be better managed anyways.

I may look into other sections to prune as well but saving us 6 million posts is a very good start.

Elitas - March 4, 2018, 3:28 pm

That's a lot of posts. First question which comes to mind is; Will this affect SEO?

Also, I'm sure a lot of members will be losing their post stats (RIP Vitani's Mate I guess).

Nachfolger - March 4, 2018, 3:33 pm

Will this effect our post count?

A majority of my posts are in the lounge.

? Soufian ? - March 4, 2018, 3:35 pm

I get your point, but wouldn't it be better to just keep them for SEO purposes?

I'm sure there are tons of discussions which attract people from outside HF and makes them register.

Biggy - March 4, 2018, 3:36 pm

Oof, that's a lot of posts. I see the need to do this though.

Punisher - March 4, 2018, 3:36 pm

It would be cool if there was a way to back the data up and archive it on a separate server, but that's too much work for no real purpose other than record keeping and nostalgia.

Biggy - March 4, 2018, 3:39 pm

Regarding the SEO comments, let's be honest, is there really much SEO we need to save from the lounge? I don't think it will affect search results too much. It's mainly other sections of HF that it would affect.

Omniscient finds a way to remove the posts, yet keep our post count the same.

I doubt it'll affect your post count since it most likely just +1's your post count everytime you post, instead of counting all of your posts.

Quote: I get your point, but wouldn't it be better to just keep them for SEO purposes?

At this point fixing and improving HF takes priority. Not sure Lounge has much SEO value anyways.

Quote: Will this effect our post count?

Yes, it might. Depends on how far back we go in order to prune the 6 million posts. After the prune a post recount will occur.

Quote: I'm sure there are tons of discussions which attract people from outside HF and makes them register.

I don't think that's true with the Lounge.

Things just need to get fixed. I can't even do anything with posts table now. A prune can greatly help.

Hmm, does HF recount all your posts? I thought it was a simple Integer which was being incremented by 1 every time you post. Since that'd be the most efficient way in my eyes.

Because whenever I replied in a thread and the thread got deleted/removed, my post count didn't seem to change. Or does the thread secretly get moved to a hidden section?

Hoodie+ - March 4, 2018, 4:01 pm

Lounge threads and posts are pretty shit anyways...

Pretty shit as in LQ content.

VirtualFrost - March 4, 2018, 4:12 pm

Seems fair, lounge posts don't necessarily ever have any need to be bumped back up so I couldn't see this being so bad.

Junks aren't deleted and do not effect post count until I prune the section. I don't think soft delete effects post count either but I would need to confirm that.

Quote:Not that its my business, but wont this affect the SEO of the site?

I think it should be noted that if Google crawls more quality content on HF instead of the lqp in Lounge it might actually improve our SEO. There is that argument to make. But I'll be honest, I'm unsure how much it will effect SEO but I think it still needs to be done.

I been contemplating for years a huge prune. Now seems a very appropriate time.

You can probably do this for the following sections: (Just some with high post counts where content is relevant based on how recent they are)

Beginner Hacking - 1.7M / Nothing fancy here, information becomes outdated as well

Hacking Tools & Programs - 1.7M / Things get outdated

Computer and Online Gaming - 1.2M / Most threads are requests.

Marketplace Discussions - 3M / Things become outdated / irrelevant (exclusion deal disputes, but that is cached by another system for the security scan, right?)

Secondary Sellers Market - 1.4M / Old sales are outdated

Buyers Bay - 1.4M / Old sales are outdated

In total thats roughly 16.7M posts. In all likelihood about 15M can be deleted without consequence. Other sections like programming if subjected to a time-based wipe could lose still relevant info, but even with that in mind I'm 100% sure that stuff like solutions to issues have similar content on other sites like StackOverflow. Its the community project threads that really need to be protected in that case. I don't know if there would be any simple rule to exclude shared projects from deletion. If that were the case it could be a site-wide wipe.

I'm sure this won't be very popular though because some people may have sentiment for some of these threads unlike common lounge shitposts. But as you said, its a matter of site stability. Worse-case you could have just tell users to save threads locally if they really care that much about some threads subject for deletion.

I don't agree for these sections. Topic sections are important because even old tutorials have value. Marketplace logs should always be kept as well. Maybe Omni will have a different opinion though.

I know there is no way to just calculate thread quality based on the content or title, but if there were some easy way to exclude these threads while removing the non-useful posts then this wipe could be much more wide-spread. A similar case where a community I was a part of allowed users to download a indemnified database of posts subject for deletion before the wipe went through.

Omniscient - March 4, 2018, 8:02 pm

Quote:So are you just deleting the oldest 6mil posts? How are you picking these posts from the table?

Simple plan. Start by figuring out how far back 2 millions posts were in the table. then go by that date and prune all threads and posts in the Lounge. Realistically it's the oldest threads that get deleted which might have different post reply dates of course. We don't have policies against gravedigging so a thread created 10 years ago with a new post would have that post deleted when the thread is removed.

That should answer your question.

Quote:Marketplace Discussions - 3M / Things become outdated / irrelevant (exclusion deal disputes, but that is cached by another system for the security scan, right?)

That's a possible general topics area which I would think about pruning. I would not prune those other sections.

But it's not that big of a deal to prune a million posts here and there when I get to do one section for 6 million.

Quote:I know there is no way to just calculate thread quality based on the content or title Really bro? The Lounge has 550k threads. So let's say I'm deleting 400k. How do you propose we calculate their quality?

Anything in the hacking tab especially the How to's tutorials are valuable no matter their age. They help bring a lot of members in, which is why I think Omni is very right on doing this pruning in the lounge. ?

Ghost.13 - March 4, 2018, 8:16 pm

Curious enough.

I know a lot of threads in the Lounge isn't really worth keeping so I guess that's why pruning is on the table, but for the sake of curiosity, is it not possible to archive the posts that are supposed to be pruned, run a one-time calculation for archived posts per user, and add that to their post count to retain the current value? I'm not familiar with how MyBB is configured though so I might be wrong, or if a plugin can do what I just stated. Just curious here.

I don't have much HQ posts in the Lounge anyway, just casual replies. So pruning is pretty much fine for me if it's what Hack Forums need in the long run.

EDIT: To give context, archiving here means taking the post records out of the main database, putting them somewhere else, and just retaining the meta-data based on the archives such as the post count.

I said that you couldn't calculate the quality. It was pointing out an ideal situation and noting that it does not line up with reality. I went on to say that in a case I was a part of the site owner let users download a database of contents scheduled for deletion so members opposed to the option could at

Sure, that's possible. Complete waste of time though. First off, there is the issue of future post recounts. Secondly, who cares? A members post count is honestly not my highest concern. I'm trying to maintain a site here.

Ehh, makes me nostalgic though. There was some seriously good discussions back in the day between older members. And not being able to search those and read them anymore is kind've sad. Getting rid of an era of posts. I understand though. The show must go on.

Honestly since my old account got closed, i don't mind this pruning, and not to be rude but i would rather waste my time doing something from this era rather than reading old discussions. And when i become nostalgic i always get sad, so i tend to avoid it ?

Quote:any thoughts on pruning the thousands of member from 2007-2009 who posted like 1 or 2 times and got closed for inactivity?

They do not represent a resource problem. But we're at 2018 and I may consider accounts older than 7 or 8 years as closed/inactive as no longer viable. There are ban evaders to consider but normally they are not associated with accounts that old.

Quote:Prune the ebook section, saves space and pain.

380k posts so even if I was to blank out the entire forum it would hardly save us any real resources. Don't let your personal view of the section cloud your judgment.

Quote:6 million is quite alot but if they're old I got no problem with it lol. Are you going to create a backup of these posts?

I keep backups anyways. They get archived. I have backups for yesterday, the day before, a month ago, then every 6 months after that. Probably have about 300Gb of backups from the years.

Quote:I remember way back sometime before Rocky II when posts in The Lounge weren't even counted towards the user total.

Yup, then people were a bitch about it and so I added Lounge to post count. Maybe I should undo that and go back to post count minus the Lounge. Something to think about I suppose.

Quote: Maybe you should clear Referral forum as well.

That's a maybe. It's 500k posts but certainly not a lot of quality content. Could get rid of 400k easily enough.

Oh and btw, let's say I prune posts and an old inactive member only had Lounge posts. The account would get pruned (deleted) too eventually. Remember, I prune 0 post accounts. So there could be gems of accounts which only made a few Lounge posts then vanished.

Mr Kewl - March 9, 2018, 12:35 pm

Hey Omni,
Don't do this.

All the posts have a great emotional value, and I don't think pruning is a good way to go about it.

None of the Big Social Media websites prune any post, rather they encourage #ThrowbackTuesday concepts or on this day concept to let you go down in history and check older posts, and it keeps your customers engaged.

I don't think it's a good biz decision to prune posts. I will write a explanatory post but would suggest highly against doing this.

Omniscient - March 9, 2018, 12:42 pm

Quote:All the posts have a great emotional value, and I don't think pruning is a good way to go about it.

We get complaints about grave-digging. And does anyone really revisit Lounge threads from 5 years ago? Yeah, it might have some small sentimental value but overall it's just taking up space.

And btw, too late. I started the prune. Xerotic hooked up the plugin I had to speed up the process and now it's running perfect. Already deleted 1.5 million posts and at this very moment another 210k threads (about 1/2 threads left) are all being deleted.

Once the prune is done I will do a recount of user posts then a prune of 0 post members.

The new pruning tool options is going to vastly help me trim HF content to something manageable which only helps to improve performance and stability of the site.

But I'm not planning on going nuts with the feature. 36 million posts is plenty and the post table looks pretty good now at 25Gb.

So overall that's 5 million posts.

Not bad, I only lost like 300 posts, which is much less than what I expected... ?

I basically lost all my old ones, which is fine. I don't care as much about anything really on stats these days. I used to be right into the whole forum stats back in the day. But I've gotten older.. almost 10 years older since I came to this site.

I think I was at 29000 posts? The purge brought me down to just under 20000 posts. Must have been a lot of Junk and Ub3r Junks posts ?
