When it's working fine, no. At working capacity it runs great. The problem is the constant lag spikes, isp slowing down our internet cuz we use alot, even though we have unlimited internet. They also fuck up the wiring every time they come out. With all these issues happening together like it usually does, it's slow and crap.

There are no laws preventing you from connecting to a wifi network, so trying to connect isn't really something you'd need to mask; not like you'd need to legit try and compensate for the disgustingly unlikely scenario a branch of the gov. such as the FBI/CIA would have an unprotected wifi network named 'fbi' + n. Letting n = whatever specific detail that network might be existing for.

You would have to deal with nosey white women calling the fbi on you and complaining to them until they visit you.
