This is a confirmation that this is our official recruitment for the Finance division.

A Message to All Applicants:

Take your time and craft your application carefully. We will only take in the most dedicated and highest of quality members.

Thank you for applying, I wish you all the best of luck!

Woods - March 5, 2018, 6:53 pm

A very specific section of the group, I'm able to give finical advice to people but haven't in the past due to the simple fact that they DON'T listen. If I do decide to give some financial advice to some users I'll apply. With that said, I hope to see this to be a very successful sector of the Samaritans.

Crystallize. - March 5, 2018, 6:56 pm

I'm a bit lost, if I can give advices for cryptos only will that work? Or I need to be specialized for everything you listed?

The members that are in the Finance division will each specialize in their own areas.

The answer would be yes, yes you can only specialize in one area.

If you have any knowledgeable advice for any topic, it would be a viable application whether it be one or more topics. You do not need to be knowledgeable in one certain topic.

What assurance is there that the advice you give is actually good advice? I doubt most people here have any relating degrees to back up their knowledge so how do you account for that?

This is exactly what the recruitment process is for. We will only take in the best applicants.

We will give the best advice we can give the user in question. However, most of us are not trained professionals. We can help users create a monthly budget plan or a savings plan on a case by case basis. We will give tips on how to increase the users credit score and how to avoid activities that will ruin the users credit. We can offer advice on different marketing, promotional and investing strategies.

All users will be advised that we are only offering advice, not a guaranteed plan of action that they should take. Even in the professional field it is like this. Trained personnel will only give advice so that they aren't held accountable for the actions of their clients.

All advice that is given will be thoroughly researched and we will provide proper sources so the user can research for themselves and make an educated decision.

We are here to help, we will do this any way can.

I would also like to add that you shouldn't jump to conclusions on one's education. There are quite a few well educated members on this forum. I finished my BA last year, and currently, I am working on finishing my honours degree for Digital Business Management.

Lovely? - March 6, 2018, 7:26 am

I'll start drafting an application when I find the time. Only group I've sought interest in for a long time.

Copywriter - March 6, 2018, 11:04 am

I will be reviewing the applications and answering any questions in a few hours when I get home.

What financial advice can you provide? You can list more than one.

Accounting, Tax advice, business management, business plans, accounts including monthly/yearly, credit control, credit advice, banking advice, pensions, selling, cryptocurrencies. The list goes on.

Do you have any experience in these financial situations? I am a fully qualified Accountant with an accountancy practice. I have also helped run plenty of different companies as a "Finance Director".

Provide (3) examples to as when you helped someone out with financial problems. (It can be a link, or a story to when you helped a friend out.)

1. Last week I saved a new client the equivalent to 700$ in taxes, she normally filed her own tax returns but I assured her I could save her money.
2. This week I met a new client who needed tax advice for their first year in business, they were confused and didn't understand how to file taxes.
3. I help different people and different businesses every single day. There are so many different stories I could tell.

Baba Yaga - March 6, 2018, 1:17 pm

What financial advice can you provide? You can list more than one.

Investing (I am actively involved both on/off-site in crypto trading. I run my own investment firm that focuses exclusively on cryptocurrencies as a viable alternative to traditional stocks as a form of investment) Marketing (I have several friends who have in-depth marketing experience whom have taught me the basics on how to sell a product to an audience and make it highly desirable. In my years in investing, it is not enough to justify your performance based on raw numbers, but a solid marketing plan along with good contacts allows for prosperity and success) Branding (I ran several Currency Exchange services on this site for groups such as Divined, Illuminati, and The Executives. I provided a safe platform for exchange between members thus promoting the image of the following groups in the marketplace) Selling (I have sold many products since my time on HackForums. I can bring my past experience and knowledge on what works, what does not, and provide my insight on what may be the next profitable product to sell. Though I myself do not participate much in this field anymore due to the time commitment of my investment firm, I am more than willing to provide help and resources to new individuals who are interested in the field within the group) Real Estate (Aside from keeping my personal investments in crypto, I also diversify my portfolio by investing in real estate. I have several apartment complexes which I rent out for monthly profit which help fund my crypto-investments as well as a lean to finance on housing projects)

Do you have any experience in these financial situations? Explain.

I myself am majoring in Business Economics in college and have my own investment firm that I run with clients whom are close friends of mine. Throughout my college career, I have learned and applied what I have been taught in the classroom to my current projects and have found profound success. Just in my Currency Exchange services on this site alone, I have been able to profit almost $100k from trades between members on this site. I have also run several successful product services such as my Spotify Premium services, my Proxy service, and my Instagram shop. Skills such as Marketing, Branding, Promotion, and exceptional Customer Service have allowed me to thrive in this environment which I hope to bring to the table in this prestigious group.

Provide (3) examples to as when you helped someone out with financial problems. (It can be a link or a story to when you helped a friend out.)

1. For my investment firm, I provide my services to help my clients gain a steady 6-8% annual return on their investment. Not only do my clients benefit from the monetary value that they receive because of my services, but they also achieve the satisfaction of being financially free to do what they would like to do in their lives. The faces of my clients when I report new gains and their expression of gratitude is all the justification I need that motivates me to perform better.

2. I provided several monetary contest giveaways here on HackForums back when I was active in several groups. I held contests for Squad and The Order as I thoroughly enjoyed what the group had to offer. Aside from my public giveaways, I also like to upgrade some members without their knowledge if I see that they are active participants in the forum looking to make this community a livelier place.

3. When I happen to have cash on me, I give whatever I can to homeless individuals who ask for money alongside the roads. When possible, I try to also give them food as well, though usually $5-10 helps out with food and some extra stuff. I know it is not much, but my goal in life is to one day be a philanthropist in which I could put my money towards a worthy cause that is beyond myself to better my surroundings.

What financial advice can you provide? You can list more than one.

- I feel like I have had an early start to the Financial world, through my parents' experiences.
- Taxes, interest, loans, credit, cryptocurrency. I feel all of those sectors are ones that I believe I am experienced in.

Do you have any experience in these financial situations? Explain.

I've done my parents' taxes for the past 2 years. Usually they'd be too busy with work so they would just hand me their W2, 1098, and a few other numbers and I would crack away at it. Also seeing my parents struggle with debt has been a good learning lesson for me. Most of my friends have no idea about cash advances, APR, interest, credit scores, and all of that, but I've learned quickly as I tried to help my parents. They also made me their accountant of sorts. I'd pay off x bill that they would tell me to, transfer x amount to savings.

Provide (3) examples to as when you helped someone out with financial problems. (It can be a link, or a story to when you helped a friend out.)

1. I have been filing my parents' taxes for the past 2 years, which can be very time consuming.
2. I really want to help my parents take the debt that we have down so that we can live a normal life and go on vacation for once, but I'm not sure how to approach it. I've been in the /personalfinance subreddit for a while so I've been learning quite a bit. I also don't want to seem like a huge dickhead telling my parents what to do in terms of which debt to pay off.
3. As I'm quite a bit young, I don't really have any other examples since it's not a job. I've made a bank account recently in my own name with no ties to my parents and began saving up. I've found a few business ventures and made a little bit of money to jump start my early career in adulthood. I did spend a few hundred dollars as well once to help try to shut down one of my dad's credit cards.

Finance has been a hobby of mine that I just recently discovered a while back and it's been fun so far. I love learning more about money management. I hope that Finance/Accounting is one of my majors, besides my main one. Still trying to decide between Business and Medical School.

Saving Money
Cryptocurrency

Do you have any experience in these financial situations? Explain.

In 2 years of working and earning only $25k a year I was able to save over $20k, while living on my own.

I budget everything and know how to save money.

Invested in crypto for the past year and a bit.

Im holding for long term and only coins or tech of the future.

Provide (3) examples to as when you helped someone out with financial problems. (It can be a link, or a story to when you helped a friend out.)

1. GF - She was $12,000 in debt and I helped her start paying it off by getting her to go for consolidation.

2. Helped my friends non-profit with book keeping. Kept track of financials and made sure he had the money to do what he needed.

3. Built a savings plan for myself and my brother, started planning meals, incomes and spending.

I would like to apply to join the group.

Before moving on I'd like to stress the fact that I consider myself useless and talentless. I don't consider myself to be a brilliant individual. The only thing that I'm good at is not giving up and constantly trying to learn new things, that's all, no flashy talents at all here. I am being honest, if what you're looking for is a splendid, genius young man with an IQ above 200, I am not your guy, trust me.

However, when I set my mind to do something, I just manage to do it no matter what. Here are some brief examples of what I mean.

1. About 2 years ago (or so) I didn't know hackforums at all, I was introduced to ewhoring from a friend of mine back then that used to do it to gain 50$ per day. I saw some untapped potential to his method and after some advice I gave them on how to expand his "ewhoring business" that led him to gain 250 to 300$. Real numbers, not even exaggerating at all. Some months later I joined HF and from then on you know the drill.

2. My momma was sued for embezzlement from her ex-boss, she wasn't guilty tho. He was claiming that she stole 20,000 from him, money that had to be used to pay business taxes normally and such. She was his secretary. I asked her to analyze me exactly what he was claiming and how exactly he is trying to frame her. We stood up all night, studying the law, criminal law and tax law. After a long day, I managed to spot a "hole" into his accusations. We noted it down, inform our lawyer about it and he was starstruck that he hadn't noticed himself before us (lol). Later on that year, trial was concluded, my mother was acquitted thanks to that hole I found out that day. We sued him back for false accusations.

3. My uncle is like a mad scientist, he is into some weird crafting shit. He got mixed up with some batteries. How to create a more powerful battery that lasts longer than the rest. I gave him that, that fucker manage to pull it off. He is so fucking stubborn, when he decides he'll do something he just does. But he had a problem on how to promote his product and which one he should cooperate with (he was afraid that somebody will steal his idea). I helped him through it. Advised him on marketing of the product and promotion. Managed to make him a pretty good deal with a big shot. He is now opening his own business. Really hope that works out. I constantly mock him, that he owns me his success, just to get on his nerves and that makes him pretty mad hahaha.

-What financial advice can you provide?

Generally I am good at marketing, investing and promoting and I am willing to learn new things and learn others after that.

All of the above are things that everybody can do if he sets his mind to. I am not special, nor I am ever going to be. All I want is to learn and help others learn too.

I hope my long ass post didn't exhaust you reading it. Thanks in advance, either I get accepted or not.

Good luck to all applicants!

What financial advice can you provide? You can list more than one.

Business - Basic Business, I've seen multiple businesses build from ground-up and know the difference between a failed one and a successful one.

Marketing - Done multiple forms and still learning.

Economics - Work at a financial firm plus I've done my fair share of trading.

Entrepreneurs - Been on a 7 year entrepreneur trip and still going, knowledge in multiple industries Off and Online.

Stocks - I've done formal education and informal to learn about trading, I'm more drawn towards Forex due to leverage options.

Investing - Always investing my money(What can you do with sitting there money?) Looking into Real Estate and other endeavors.

Money Management - Good with budgeting and can help people with whatever they need to know.

Do you have any experience in these financial situations? Explain.

Yes, I also have some associates that can help me or anybody in the group if they have a problem they're unable to solve within the User group. I've been Forex investing for the past 2 1/4 years, and in the process of getting my Life Insurance license, also basic knowledge of some tax info and credit repair. I also just started my own Auto Detailing business and in the process of getting a business license, and have lots of background experience of managing businesses due to family. I've also done IM(Internet Marketing), Direct Marketing, email, Business to Business, and Door to Door and can help craft strategies to people in need. In addition, I used to promote for the Nightlife Industry and Event shows so I know what people want to hear in order to close a sale.

Provide (3) examples to as when you helped someone out with financial problems. (It can be a link, or a story to when you helped a friend out.)

1. Always help people save/budget their money with my Financial Brokerage Firm.
2. Helping people out with new income opportunities when they're in tough spots.(I've done handouts and some people are quick to take them but not build work ethic and sustaining income)
3. My Financial firm is partnered with a debt reducing company that is able to eliminate 40-60% debt if your amount is 5+ Figures overall.
4. I felt number 3 was somewhat of an extension of Number one and just had to add another example, I'm always charitable and wanting to help people in general, but I've talked my family into hiring homeless people who I saw potential in and were struggling at the time regardless of however hard my family tried to disagree.

P.S. I feel this group resonates with me the best because I'm a student of the game and want to help others(The Idea of a Samaritan) but also learn all the while because we all have to remain coachable. Hoping to hear from you guys soon and wish you all the best.

Hi so i posted in the computing section but i wasn't sure where to post either here or in the finance section but after my post i was advised to apply here so im going to copy and paste my application below :)

I wasn't sure weather to apply for the finance or computing section so im going to post a bit about me and if you like me then its all good.

I have decided not to follow your application format and have gone with something i believe will show me off a bit better.

About me:

I am an 18 year old student currently studying Software Development and in September i will be going to university to study a Computing degree. Im quite a money hungry person and the whole this forum was for looking for a way to make money i started with e-Whoring bearing in mind i was only 14 at this point. From there I went to crypto mining, I used to rent out mining rigs online using sites like my nicehash and mine crypto in hope of turning a profit. I then became an affiliate for an ad network and got into CPA. From here I dived into the world of crypto investing which ive been on a journey with the past six months or so and finally recently I started my own web hosting business.

I have been an active member of the community here at HF and i don't know any specific thread of mine which stand out for me helping people but throughout my journey of making money once i got a grasp of an area i used to help other people by being constantly active in there sub forums. Ill try and gather a list of my threads and posts which i think might show how ive helped.

What financial advice can you provide? You can list more than one.

I am experienced self thought trader especially cryptos. I am a partner of Bull and we are running the biggest signal and crypto teaching service here on HF. In addition to that I have my own consulting company regarding crypto investments in real life and manage a fairly big capital for my investors. I trade a minimum of 4 hours a day. In addition to that I opened my own startup which I am building up right now. I have finished my bachelor at Uni while working on both of these projects 6 hours a day.

Do you have any experience in these financial situations? Explain.

As a tutor teaching the markets of crypto and how to find good trades I would like to think of myself to have huge amounts of experience. I have a bachelor in business management and entrepreneurship so I have more than enough experience there aswell.

What financial advice can you provide? You can list more than one.

first of all i can provide crypto advice. i have been in crypto trading for about 5 months now and i can also do TA. though i am not an expert i am at least an intermediary on the crypto subject, and can provide a lot of advice for people new to the subject.

I am also fairly educated on marketing. though i have no official degree i have spent months, and especially the last month using at least 2-3 hours doing marketing for my own and other businesses. including copywriting, deploying marketing tactics, making advertisement for my own as well as other businesses etc.

i am knowledge about instagram and facebook advertising especially i also have fair experience in promotion. as this subject ties into marketing as well.

i can also contribute to the entrepreneur section as i have been living off online income the past years. i run multiple online stores, i own my own offshore company, and i have a fair amount of knowledge on the subject in general.

Do you have any experience in these financial situations? Explain.

all the experience i have is self taught and self gained. though i have no official education i have learnt many, many things on my own that can benefit others. and as i already mentioned above i have experience with marketing as i market both my own products and products and services of people i work with. i have experience with entrepreneurship as i built myself up from earning nothing a day to earning a fair bit a day, using a wide variety of methods and skills online.

1. i recently taught multiple people completely new to dropshipping and and online sales how to utilize and use facebook ads.
2. i have helped multiple people make crypto trading decisions with both FA and TA, and advised them if a trade would be good or not.

3. i have helped many of my friends with their budgeting, investing and other issues and ventures in the past.

What financial advice can you provide? You can list more than one.

- Business, marketing, entrepreneurship, investing, cryptos, money management.

Do you have any experience in these financial situations? Explain.

- I have several years of business experience ranging from ecommerce to cryptocurrency projects, all of which are high 5-6 figure businesses. I would prefer not to go into specifics on the businesses I'm involved in, however I've been entrepreneurial for about 6 years now.
