I'm kinda new to town, but I've done my homework. Is there any program licensing system like netseal I can setup on my programs. ?

BetterSeal is not a good system in my opinion, and it is shut down. The "revamped" version is Authed, but the security is the same so it's not good.

Thank you for linking that.

OP: I recommend looking into EZLib as it has accumulated lots of features in the short span that it has been running, and more than Net Seal or any other licensing solution. Affordable, secure, and stable.

Do they have a free version to try out and start with. I'll invest more as I grow

I'm currently playing around with EZLib, so far it seems to be messign with me, I was just about to post a thread about the reference errors I keep getting even though I referenced the DLL.
