Thread: I'd like to volunteer in summer

Captain P. - March 12, 2018, 1:31 pm

Hi.

I'm an European and I'm looking to do some volunteering in summer. I was thinking about working in summer camps across the states. I love the woods and being outdoors but I have no clue which states are good.

Also do you know of any close by camps that accepts foreigners, whom speak fluently English, as volunteers?

I wouldn't suspect they wouldn't accept you just because of your country of origin. As for that question though, Not sure try doing some research.

I am not from the states so I cannot say for sure. Here, you can volunteer in social and community projects.

I've sent an application to Yosemite park, let's see.

You can always try to find some summer camps in France. You get people all over Europe - south, east and west (no Scandinavians for obvious reasons). Those camps are usually based on volunteers that prepare food for the whole camp, work in stores, etc.

A friend of mine went. Lots of fun, booze and sex.

I wish you good luck with your application.

If you consider Canada, I have some options for you right outside of Toronto.

I wouldn't mind Canada either. I will message you!

I think you might need a special visa to volunteer in the States, specifically, you'll need a B-1 visa, which may be hard to get depending on which European country you originate from.

All the best! Thank you for giving back to the community! ?

I'm from The Netherlands so wouldn't be a big issue. Friends of mine emigrated to the States sometime ago.
