the file opens automatically when sent. the victim wont even realize. I've seen this method long time ago it was in the cold war 1941 I was studying in University that time. I remember our windows -44 got hacked in the university and important data was stolen. It was a RAT sent through skype to the headteacher. They found out it was Turkojan 1934 version. An outdated RAT at the time but still 2 years newers and in front of the antivirus Eset NOD32 couldn't find it as it was crypted. They should've update the antivirus Eset Nod32 to Eset Nod41 but whatever they forgot about that software long ago and people still use it nowadays and antivirus scanners just give fake positives and fake detections just to scare people and think that Eset nod 1932 is still a thing LMAO and they use it , can you imagine?.
