

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Crazy story

rsx - March 18, 2018, 12:34 am

So this happened 2 days ago when I was walking to work, that it was just too crazy not to share. One of the most shocking and crazy things to happen in my boring life.

So I live pretty close to my work, and I walk to work sometimes when I can't get a ride. I walk along the train tracks with no problem mostly. That day I was walking, and I noticed that there was a mom and her son (no more than 4 years old) trying to get over to the train tracks. Between the train tracks and the woods there is this crick type thing which is really muddy, so she was trying to walk along a log to get over with her son. As I was walking by she stopped me and asked me to hold her sons hand and help him over, so I did. As we were waiting there for his mom to cross over, I hear this train horn blaring behind me. Without even thinking or looking, I grab pick this kid up and jump over this crick, getting my shoes muddy but making it over safely. Nobody was hurt. Got over within 3 seconds of the train passing us. Heard the conductor yell at me "IDIOT!!" as he went by. Yeah I know man, I should have gotten him to the side of the track but we were only standing there for a few seconds.

We didn't even hear this train coming until it honked its horn, and me and the mom were just standing there in shock about what just happened. Before I left she said "thank you for saving his life".

Was the craziest thing i've ever experienced.

Wolf - March 18, 2018, 12:39 am

Oh shit. I'm glad everything went well.

I'm glad you managed to save someone and even more, you did it instinctively. Gratitude is also nice. Both for you, kid and the mom. All 3 of you were saved that day.

rsx - March 18, 2018, 12:41 am

(Mar 18, 2018 12:39 AM)G 0 d Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Oh shit. I'm glad everything went well.

I'm glad you managed to save someone and even more, you did it instinctively. Gratitude is also nice. Both for you, kid and the mom. All 3 of you were saved that day.

Shit was crazy man. I keep thinking like what if I didn't instinctively grab the kid, and just jumped over myself. It makes me sick thinking about it i'm just glad that it all went down well.

Zexi - March 18, 2018, 12:47 am

You are lucky considering how many deaths happen on the tracks. People usually freeze when they hear the horn and the train hits them.

Good job on handling it and not panicking.

Theocritus - March 18, 2018, 12:53 am nothing crazy has really happened in my life... its just chill so far

rsx - March 18, 2018, 1:00 am

(Mar 18, 2018 12:47 AM)Zexi Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You are lucky considering how many deaths happen on the tracks. People usually freeze when they hear the horn and the train hits them.

Good job on handling it and not panicking.

Yeah man. It just happened so fast too like it's just crazy to think about. I think i'm gonna remember that moment for the rest of my life.

Ninja - March 18, 2018, 1:05 am

Glad everything turned out ok. But now you always have a crazy story to tell of how heroic you were.

Temp_reassign - March 18, 2018, 1:25 am

(Mar 18, 2018 12:41 AM)lil water Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Shit was crazy man. I keep thinking like what if I didn't instinctively grab the kid, and just jumped over myself. It makes me sick thinking about it i'm just glad that it all went down well.exactly this. man! honestly happy and proud too you acted very swiftly. 3 seconds sounds like... wow man. Just imagine the sorrow that mom would be engulfed in if you had selfishly saved just yourself. I bet she is telling the story to everyone who cares to listen. ha! Jesus wept!

SIM-403479 - March 18, 2018, 1:27 am

Congrats on saving a life OP.

CYB3RM4N - March 18, 2018, 2:33 am

Oh man, sounds pretty crazy and exhilarating, thankfully nobody was injured.

Odd that you couldn't hear a train approaching though, as those things can get really loud.

Mr Meeseeks - March 18, 2018, 9:49 am

That is crazy, I am glad that nobody was hurt.

?BIG Punisher™ - March 18, 2018, 9:51 am

Blimey, glad nothing bad happened in the end buddy.

rsx - December 4, 2020, 10:39 pm

Still can't believe this happened.

Cooligan - December 4, 2020, 10:42 pm

(Dec 4, 2020 11:39 PM)Nuzi Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Still can't believe this happened.

Looks like you want to make sure others know about it still. :P

rsx - December 4, 2020, 10:43 pm

(Dec 4, 2020 11:42 PM)Cooligan Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Looks like you want to make sure others know about it still. :P

Yes because this one of the craziest things that has happened in my crazy life xd

siddy357 - December 5, 2020, 2:09 am

(Mar 18, 2018 12:34 AM)Nuzi Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So this happened 2 days ago when I was walking to work, that it was just too crazy not to share. One of the most shocking and crazy things to happen in my boring life.

So I live pretty close to my work, and I walk to work sometimes when I can't get a ride. I walk along the train tracks with no problem mostly. That day I was walking, and I noticed that there was a mom and her son (no more than 4 years old) trying to get over to the train tracks. Between the train tracks and the woods there is this crick type thing which is really muddy, so she was trying to walk along a log to get over with her son. As I was walking by she stopped me and asked me to hold her sons hand and help him over, so I did. As we were waiting there for his mom to cross over, I hear this train horn blaring behind me. Without even thinking or looking, I grab pick this kid up and jump over this crick, getting my shoes muddy but making it over safely. Nobody was hurt. Got over within 3 seconds of the train passing us. Heard the conductor yell at me "IDIOT!!" as he went by. Yeah I know man, I should have gotten him to the side of the track but we were only standing there for a few seconds.

We didn't even hear this train coming until it honked its horn, and me and the mom were just standing there in shock about what just happened. Before I left she said "thank you for saving his life".

Was the craziest thing i've ever experienced.

You just did the right thing but should have looked for the train before crossing the track.

2xTheTap115 - December 5, 2020, 3:01 am

(Mar 18, 2018 12:34 AM)Nuzi Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So this happened 2 days ago when I was walking to work, that it was just too crazy not to share. One of the most shocking and crazy things to happen in my boring life.

So I live pretty close to my work, and I walk to work sometimes when I can't get a ride. I walk along the train tracks with no problem mostly. That day I was walking, and I noticed that there was a mom and her son (no more than 4 years old) trying to get over to the train tracks. Between the train tracks and the woods there is this crick type thing which is really muddy, so she was trying to walk along a log to get over with her son. As I was walking by she stopped me and asked me to hold her sons hand and help him over, so I did. As we were waiting there for his mom to cross over, I hear this train horn blaring behind me. Without even thinking or looking, I grab pick this kid up and jump over this crick, getting my shoes muddy but making it over safely. Nobody was hurt. Got over within 3 seconds of the train passing us. Heard the conductor yell at me "IDIOT!!" as he went by. Yeah I know man, I should have gotten him to the side of the track but we were only standing there for a few seconds.

We didn't even hear this train coming until it honked its horn, and me and the mom were just standing there in shock about what just happened. Before I left she said "thank you for saving his life".

Was the craziest thing i've ever experienced.

True madness indeed, but you behaved in a truly heroic manner. You can be really proud of yourself, buddy

P.S. You get a small gift from me

zboub - December 6, 2020, 4:37 pm

you saved the life of this little one, this mother should be ashamed to make her children take risks

Forensic - December 6, 2020, 4:48 pm

(Mar 18, 2018 12:34 AM)Nuzi Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So this happened 2 days ago when I was walking to work, that it was just too crazy not to share. One of the most shocking and crazy things to happen in my boring life.

So I live pretty close to my work, and I walk to work sometimes when I can't get a ride. I walk along the train tracks with no problem mostly. That day I was walking, and I noticed that there was a mom and her son (no more than 4 years old) trying to get over to the train tracks. Between the train tracks and the woods there is this crick type thing which is really muddy, so she was trying to walk along a log to get over with her son. As I was walking by she stopped me and asked me to hold her sons hand and help him over, so I did. As we were waiting there for his mom to cross over, I hear this train horn blaring behind me. Without even thinking or looking, I grab pick this kid up and jump over this crick, getting my shoes muddy but making it over safely. Nobody was hurt. Got over within 3 seconds of the train passing us. Heard the conductor yell at me "IDIOT!!" as he went by. Yeah I know man, I should have gotten him to the side of the track but we were only standing there for a few seconds.

We didn't even hear this train coming until it honked its horn, and me and the mom were just standing there in shock about what just happened. Before I left she said "thank you for saving his life".

Was the craziest thing i've ever experienced.

Are you glad it happened(experience wise & you saved somebodies life) or do you have a weird sort of PTSD from it?

A + - December 6, 2020, 4:58 pm

I guess they tell you not to play on train tracks for a reason. I never thought about the fact that they only blow their horn at railway crossings.

jecoylecroy - December 6, 2020, 9:08 pm

Good work my friend you just save another life.

Telstra - December 6, 2020, 11:00 pm

Why walk along train tracks, in my country that is very strange

rsx - August 27, 2021, 10:07 pm

(Dec 7, 2020 12:00 AM)Telstra Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Why walk along train tracks, in my country that is very strange

In my country, in rural areas mostly, it is common for people to walk alongside the train tracks for a couple reasons:

1. Safer than walking on the side of the road or highway, where there are mostly no sidewalks.
2. Sometimes quicker to take a shortcut along the train tracks, in my case it used to cut my walk to work almost in half.

I can see why it would be strange if the train tracks in your country are busy or in the city like a subway. In rural areas, the tracks are only used once or twice a day in some places.

clean - October 5, 2021, 12:59 am

(Mar 18, 2018 12:34 AM)rsx Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) So this happened 2 days ago when I was walking to work, that it was just too crazy not to share. One of the most shocking and crazy things to happen in my boring life.

So I live pretty close to my work, and I walk to work sometimes when I can't get a ride. I walk along the train tracks with no problem mostly. That day I was walking, and I noticed that there was a mom and her son (no more than 4 years old) trying to get over to the train tracks. Between the train tracks and the woods there is this crick type thing which is really muddy, so she was trying to walk along a log to get over with her son. As I was walking by she stopped me and asked me to hold her sons hand and help him over, so I did. As we were waiting there for his mom to cross over, I hear this train horn blaring behind me. Without even thinking or looking, I grab pick this kid up and jump over this crick, getting my shoes muddy but making it over safely. Nobody was hurt. Got over within 3 seconds of the train passing us. Heard the conductor yell at me "IDIOT!!" as he went by. Yeah I know man, I should have gotten him to the side of the track but we were only standing there for a few seconds.

We didn't even hear this train coming until it honked its horn, and me and the mom were just standing there in shock about what just happened. Before I left she said "thank you for saving his life".

Was the craziest thing i've ever experienced.

Holy cow man. You're a great person for this, I would've done the same thing. Glad everyone is okay <3

Goku - October 5, 2021, 1:09 am

God damn, that could have ended up horribly wrong.

Nate - October 5, 2021, 1:12 am

I never had one of those experiences, I've cheated death myself a couple times but never really saved anyone

Kaiba Corp - October 5, 2021, 4:20 am

That could've gone horribly wrong, but glad to hear everyone involved is okay