Thread: Trust Scan Enabled

Omniscient - March 26, 2018, 8:09 pm

I have fixed the issue with IPs that's didn't convert on the upgrade. This has allowed me to enable the Trust Scan again. There is however still some issue with IPv6 compatibility and our geo location setup. I have found an API to use that will fit our needs very well. It will require some development and plugins which I hope to accomplish the coding within 1-2 weeks.

For now TS is enabled again and working for the most part. Any questions?

As far as I know, 3p1c is just an add-on for L33ts and Ub3rs. Think of it as a slightly cheaper upgrade for L33ts that doesn't need approval like Ub3r.

Glad this one is back. I don't usually comment on these threads since they're usually all reposts of the same thing, but this is a great re-addition to the site. Thanks for prioritising it, it'll hopefully save a bunch of people (who honestly should be doing further checks on accounts prior to doing deals but we all know they won't).

Canadian - March 27, 2018, 9:13 am

Very happy this is back. I almost engaged in a trade with a scammer who took advantage of the feature being down over the last little while. Only if a mass email could be sent out to everything to tell them to add their details to the database since the trust scan is back. Would really help, but oh well. Great news nonetheless

It's a users' choice as to whether or not they use a VPN. It's on them if someone else uses the same IP and does something stupid.

Isn't that a problem? Say you and I share the same IP, I do something stupid, and because of that we both get closed. I guess it's up to you if you want to be closed or not, and you should be aware about that before you jump on a VPN, but we're all ppl that makes mistake

How you want to interpret Trust Scan and a users activity in the Marketplace and on-site is up to you. We only provide the statistical data. If a user wants to use a lot of IPs that's up to them but it may hamper them from being trusted.

We should hold a competition of sorts for his information in the Private Investigation Methods and Anonymity Section, so we can eventually get his parents' phone number and call them.

We've already been working on this over on Hacker.im. We have lots of his family's names and working on going further. Our end goal is nothing malicious, just to speak with him and his family and discuss it so that he learns from this and doesn't think that he can scam people in the future.

Maybe I am.

Still, he fucked with the wrong forum. If he comes back again, even if he doesn't scam at all, I'm going to pass my findings onto some individuals and we will try to speak to people who know him to urge him to stop.

It's very difficult to actually get through to this guy, he's been scamming on the regular since 2013. All we need to do is show the people he knows IRL what he's doing, and then maybe they can get him to stop. His parents seem to be very respectable people to me anyway. I'm sure if we spoke to them about this they would be shocked.

Just food for thought anyway, I won't do anything if he leaves the community alone, and I would urge anyone else to let this pass so long as he distances himself from the community. Something gives me the feeling we'll be seeing him again soon though.

EDIT: Just for the record; I have no intentions of involving his parents. I would potentially pass them on information about this so that they can encourage him to stop - That's it. I also have no intentions of harassing him as an individual, nor do I plan to make any sensitive information of his public. I may speak to him about this over the phone or something if he continues.

Yeah, pretty much this. But, I wouldn't say he's a scam or anything. I'd merely forward them information about him, and only ever forward it once. I'd tell them what he did in the community and how he has stolen money from people. I won't bother pursuing them any further, but hopefully they are good parents and will speak to him about it.

I won't be doing this yet, I still need to consider the options and see if he will actually return to the community.

Xerotic, you should add a color result to every option.
Even the dates.

Or is there a reason you didn't do this (I'm assuming because it would involve logic to parse the dates)?

Xerotic has not touched TS. And some dates are colored.

Omniscient - April 6, 2018, 9:16 am

Quote:Yes, some are. But the dates in the screenshot (password change, email change, username change) are not - at least in this scenario.

The colors are used as indicators. Change to username, password, and emails may not necessarily mean anything. So it's imho something I am happy to provide a date for only. So it's intentional those don't have colors. Example would be a new l33t who may have been on HF for 3 months. He upgraded today to do some deals and changes his username. To me that doesn't indicate anything for a trust level. And btw when you have no changes to your username it's green.

Also working on fixing some other things broken on TS and improving the feature more.
