Thread: ripping the video off a website

Pedro7680 - March 30, 2018, 1:22 am

Hi,

can someone point me in the right direction. I have an online course that presents the info as a videos, im looking for some software to get the video and the audio recorded off of this.

can anyone point me in the right direction?

thanks

In what way is it presented? I know that some of my instructors in college host their own content which can be retrieved through wget in linux. I need more information to help you further.

right clicking on the video mentions "wistia" as being the app playing the video.

if that helps? looking at the page source has no link to a video file

It's possible but harder than expected. It's not worth the hassle if you don't want the video that hard. If you do, message me.

unable to message you, due to my low post count :(

i would like to get these videos ripped before Mid May, when the course year expires.
Video content is pretty good for reference.

google hasnt provided me with much help.

Hey OP,

Is it possible for you to use a screen-capture software such as OBS to record the video/audio.

Phaser33 - April 2, 2018, 1:15 pm

try software like replay media catcher or getflv

Pedro7680 - April 3, 2018, 1:24 am thanks guys, i will try these this morning.

the easies software for you is idm...

it's super easy...

but man you dont want to mass with higer eduction and...

you got any iead how much they earn and the amout of lawyers they got.....

(if you'r planing to rip/torrent/... videos from theis places be carfull...)

anubishack - April 23, 2018, 8:42 am ya internet download manager or helper you can take video on the sites blackops106 - April 26, 2018, 3:56 am

Contact me. I'll be able to rip this video from the site free of charge. Need the URL though.
