Omniscient - March 30, 2018, 3:37 pm

It's now installed.

You should see "Alerts()" in top left next to "User CP".

In UserCP you can alter settings:

<https://hackforums.net/alerts.php?action=settings>

In UserCP you can view all alerts:

<https://hackforums.net/alerts.php>

We're still adjusting and testing the feature so feel free to give us feedback.

Bluffer - March 30, 2018, 3:38 pm

Great feature to have here. Thanks for making it happen!

FamousHater - March 30, 2018, 3:39 pm

hmm

"when somebody rates your thread"

is it gonna give us that persons name?

Crystallize. - March 30, 2018, 3:39 pm

A bug I've found

If you open PMs normally alert will still show so I think that's a bug other than that, awesome!

Xerotic - March 30, 2018, 3:40 pm

Time to see how this affects HF. Looks like a decent plugin.

Danny Khalifa - March 30, 2018, 3:40 pm

Thank you very much for adding this feature.

Motusora - March 30, 2018, 3:40 pm does it include if someone gives you rep or if someone will post on your thread ?

thanks for adding this feature anyway ?

edit : it's on the thread, sorry i was an idiot rushing to reply hoping that somebody will quote my post for testing purposes . lmao

Riyu - March 30, 2018, 3:41 pm

Could the number of alerts be the color red or something?

Also, could we have a "read all alerts" button too?

But yes.

MyAlerts defaults to white if you've already read it. It's a common issue with this plugin on darker themes, and a simple fix for Omniscient.

By the way, I've tested it out and it shows the name of the person who rates your thread. Will be useful and glad this is showing it, but not sure if Omniscient wants it that way.

I know you aren't a big fan of the plugin. But, if you get Xerotic to tweak it around, it will end up looking really nice and working very well with the forum, I'm confident of that. I've seen plenty of forums use this plugin and make it work well.

It's directed at Omni. You can't add the source code yourself as it's not entirely client side. It's going to require a template edit in order to add it in - If he's interested then I can pass the logic/code onto him for it to be implemented.

Sure thing. Sent him a message already about this and waiting on a reply.
It wouldn't need testing though. It's honestly a really simple concept, if you want me to explain it to you in PM you can easily write the code yourself and understand how it works.

It's not the most pretty code, but it's pretty short, as in maybe 1-2 lines.

Already written. Took me a few minute of testing. A few minutes to install and maybe a few more minutes to do some CSS changes.

I'm sure the plugin will need more alterations but the best part is that this is technically not a huge waste of time. To code this from scratch would be ridiculous and Xerotic wants to do that but I'd rather get to other things I deem much more important.

For now members have the notifications they've been asking for.

Great addition, however I find it real annoying that I receive an alert upon a PM. That is useless. I went to alert settings and unchecked it, but I feel like it should be unchecked by default since we already have a bar taking up a whole line horizontally to tell you that you have received a new PM.

2SLickZ - March 30, 2018, 8:46 pm

Once we've seen the alerts, it should be greyed out, not always lit up.

Then when a new alert comes in, it would light up again.

Just a suggestion.

Thank you for the addition of this feature. I understand why you do not like it, but the internet ecosystem has changed due to the massive influx of the social networking sites. Disable it in settings.

Quote: I went to alert settings and unchecked it, but I feel like it should be unchecked by default since we already have a bar taking up a whole line horizontally to tell you that you have received a new PM. And technically you can decide to disable the PM notification bar and use the My Alert.

You can click "Delete All Alerts" on the popup to do that. And right now it's functioning as-is stock install with no real customizations to the code.

Rest is pretty much awesome, love it. I just disabled alerts when I receive PMs, I find that bar over whole forum much more appealing.

On this page do you see it?
<https://hackforums.net/alerts.php>

It's in the database but it doesn't have much info. Tested this on Knot and it does the same thing so either the plugin is broken or it works poorly to notify on reputation. I was expecting this to be better for a 3 year old plugin with 128 page support thread and written by a MyBB dev team member.

This plugin is written in an abstraction layer framework which makes it difficult to go through the code to correct what it does.

It is.The alert is supposed to be removed because you've already opened the PM so it's old alert.
Anyway this can be expected from this plugin since it's old and poorly written.

Elitas - March 31, 2018, 5:02 am

The reason for this bug is because the alerts requires that you click on the alert.php redirection instead of the actual link itself.

<https://hackforums.net/alerts.php?action=view&id=IDHERE>.

This allows the alerts plugin to know where to redirect you and it 'ticks it off' on your alerts pop-up.

Omniscient - March 31, 2018, 12:54 pm

Quote:Even if you reply to a PM, the alert still shows as (1).

You need to click the alert to make it (0)

That's how it is. The Alerts appear to be separate entities requiring you to mark the alerts as read even if you read the material they link to. It's how it works. So basically we will all be clicking the Alerts constantly to mark them read. Let's see how quick that will annoy users.

Quote:The reason for this bug is because the alerts requires that you click on the alert.php redirection instead of the actual link itself.

Correct. You now have to navigate the site through the Alerts if you want them marked efficiently.

Quote:I understand though why you would like your own custom system but welp.

Well, maybe you understand why I didn't add this plugin 3 years ago. First issue is that it was updated for 1.8x and we were still 1.6x. The second issue is that I looked at the code and how it functioned years ago and I didn't like it. The third issue is that creating a good notification system should be using browser web push notifications and it doesn't. I suspect we'll be looking into that by the summer at this pace.

<https://support.mozilla.org/en-US/kb/push-notifications-firefox>

<https://developers.google.com/web/fundamentals/push-notifications/>

Quote:Yeah the actual integration of the alerts is shit.

I hate to shit on the plugin but it does suck. Works as it is intended but really bloated code that doesn't follow MyBB standards and requires pluginLibrary too. Lots of thing both Xerotic and I really dislike about this. He was totally against me installing this but from my perspective, we have better things to do. In the meantime this works just well enough to install it and the feedback we get will help us either alter this plugin or know what features we'll need in a new one written from scratch.

Quote:I'd be far more interested in what the likes of Xerotic could do with this plugin.

Likely we're going to minimize alterations to it for now. We'll fix bugs and maybe improve UIX and certain functionality but I don't think I want to expand it and that includes installing MentionMe which within minutes of installing this I got a PM suggesting I do so.

Quote:Out of curiosity, is this a custom version or Euan T's one?

It is Euans.

Quote:Mobile notifications would require a server/service though.

I had a cool idea. Because people have been asking for a "mark all as read" function, and others have been annoyed that when you've already read specific PMs or viewed threads, it's still showing it in the alerts!

So, whenever you open up the modal, it should mark them all as read (same as alerts.php). Maybe this is overkill, but it could solve the issues and I think it'd be nice. Not sure if I should post this as a suggestion or not, just leaving it here as feedback for now I guess.

Elitas - March 31, 2018, 2:35 pm

(Mar 31, 2018 02:31 PM)xadamxk Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It actually already does that if you view it from the Alerts panel in UserCP - just not the modal.

I assume it's because you can skim them from the modal and come back to it.

Ahh, that's really cool. If we just simply added that to the modal it'd be awesome. Maybe even some JS to change them to the 'read' white background once you view it would be satisfying.

Nice addition indeed, but when I receive PM's and open them through the PM notification the alert still shows the notification, even after I opened it. Is it happening only to me and how can I change it?

I just got a alert that I was quoted in a thread I never posted in, and no one quoted me in the thread. Not sure why?

I originally wasn't too sure how much I would like this, but on the hole it seems like this is actually pretty useful as much as a million alerts could be annoying. Considering there is the option to disable alerts, I think this is a nice addition and over time could be tweaked to be excellent.

CA905 - April 3, 2018, 10:20 pm

I love this new feature added! Just one thing I noticed. I was going back and forth with a member via PM and even though I would click on the pms and respond right away and what have you, the alerts weren't clearing on their own. Would that be possible or is the only way to clear to actually click on the alerts or delete all?

I seem to have develop a tendency to always clear while in the PM section and every time I do that, I go to this page.

That sucks. Also sucks that someone who indirectly scammed me is updating his -3 on me and I get alerted. Other than that I love it ?

Do you guys get alerts for reputation? I have it checked but I don't get any.

I get the same notification regardless of whether it's green or red. This has all been for new rep, I don't think anyone has modified an existing rep for me. It says "Username modified your reputation."

1. Not a bug. The view alerts is a search, when cleared, there's an invalid search. You just close the window and all good.

2. Yeah figured the problem. It has code i suppose, connected to other checkboxes than the reputation one.

There's like some cool down on it. The notification message does say their may have been more posts since the alert. So I would assume it was designed not to spam 50 alerts if your thread had 50 posts in a day.

He just copied your reply from one thread to another and you got notified of the quote.
It's normal because myAlerts uses quote='user' instead of checking if user actually posted on the thread.
