Thread: Final UI

How did it end up turning out? I enjoy trying to design, even though I am not good at it ?
(The color scheme.)

Nothing great actually but I like the simplicity of the ui. I can still see the bootstrap spirit in there tho.

I have a terrible taste for design, and don't know too much css. I assume I can mess with it a bit more, though.

I like it it's pretty simple and sleek.

You can. <https://getbootstrap.com/docs/4.0/getting-started/theming/>. Good luck bro. :)

Orange is not the colour I would go with but other than that it looks fine.

I don't think I'm that interested in learning css. I love making the backend, behind the scenes actually function. It's rewarding sort of

Yeah I'd change the orange to just be the same as the background of everything else or a little darker

The whole website is a dark & orange theme.

Yeah, I think darker would be the way to go. Especially if orange is part of the theme. Other than that though, I'm diggin it.

It looks decent, but you need to have a color scheme going on when designing.

Did you read my replies? I do.

Mr Meeseeks - March 31, 2018, 9:29 pm

Nice look with the simplicity, but the colors just don't seem right. Maybe do more of an Ubuntu style with the colors?

I did read your replies, but the color scheme doesn't really match that well. This tool <https://coolors.co> will help you create more stylish UI's.

I'll look into it, thanks.

Me personally love the ui simplicity but the colour scheme is for me not fitting.

SIM-3391627 - April 12, 2018, 4:37 am

I like it.. but it feels like orange needs to change and the black a little bit darker.

steviejenkins - April 15, 2018, 6:16 am

The colour scheme is fine, makes what should be seen clearly visible.

However, if you could make the orange a bit transparent then replace it with maybe black/grey/dark purple, it would be more visually appealing
