I seem to struggle with H.S. level geometry, is there any techniques you guys know to help me in geometry? I don't seem to understand the theorems and proving something is what it is like similar or congruent.

You have to study man.

Similar triangles just have the same ratio side to side.

Congruent shapes are shape that are the same size and everything, just oriented differently.

And don't tell me you do study, because obviously you don't if you don't understand even what a similar triangle is

Use the internet as your resource. Checkout Khan Academy... YouTube.. Resources are at your disposal.

Lol wtf? You study the chapters you covered in class. For example, my last math test was over chapter 6.1, 6.2, 6.5 and 7.1 and 7.2 . So there's the class material to study.

You can go to your teacher " Hey what chapters are the test over?" "Hey what should I study" "Hey I'm an idiot can you tutor me"

If you're not getting proper practice, notes, tell someone. Say teacher isn't doing their job, or what's more than likely the actual case, you need help in class. A tutor. The staff at your school is (I know this may be surprising to you) there to actually help you.

If I'm coming off like an asshole, it's because I kinda am. You need to put that effort out there. Text someone in class, ask someone what the test is on.

You can do something, only if you have huge balls: Ask a girl for her notes, they take GRADE A notes .
