Thread: Shopify:How I helped a client go from losing money to \$4000/day and how YOU can too!

Enzio - April 5, 2018, 4:22 pm

So I've had many users PMed me asking what they could do to make more money on their Shopify store but it just takes a lot of time to go through everyone's ads and stores and spot exactly where are the problems and what can they do to fix them. This is a client I was working with for the past week. So... think of this as a case study ?

Before we start, you should know that he was already making a few sales before but his ads just died and everything stopped and he started losing money every single day. He already figured out what was working but he could figure out how to actually make money from his products without losing money everytime he scaled. This is mostly for those who already have something that is working and is past the testing phase.

Facebook Ads:

When I first start my ads, I always start with the US but he decided to start with US/Canada/UK/Europe/AUS/NZ. Which is fine, for the most part, but there was a slight problem with that. Facebook was displaying his ads to all those countries but only 3 of them were having the highest ROAS(Return On Ad Spend). Basically, he was spending money on countries that were not converting at all. The issue here is that most people who use Facebook Ads do not actually read their ads data and I've seen it countless of time from users sending me screenshots of their ads manager.

If you do not spend time reading your data and figuring out where you are spending money, you will lose money. So what I did is I break down all his ads by gender, region, country,time of the day,etc and found out that the only countries making him sales were; Canada,US and England. Australia and New-Zealand were working quite too but they were not bringing that much of a ROAS. Then, I found out that the only people from 21-45 were buying his products.

So he was showing ads to people over 45 but they just weren't converting. Then, I found out that he would only get sales from like 3am to 10pm.

So I made new ads with everything I just said and the ROAS was already better. However, even though we were getting traffic, it just was not converting that well. Which brings me to my next point.

Store Optimization:

So like I said, although we were getting traffic, it was converting at 1%. While the market's average is 1-2%, in his niche it was not enough.

I've paid a lot of money to figure out how to properly optimize a store so I will not give you exactly what I did to his but I will still give you some steps you can do.

1: A big green Add To Cart Button.

Some of y'all store, I need put my glasses and squint like an idiot to figure out where is the add to cart button. Customize your store so that the ATC button is big enough so people can see it. If people have to find where to add the product to their cart for 2min they will leave. I said green cause it is said to be one of the colors that convert the most but depending on your store, it might be different. For example, for Amazon, it is orange. So test it.

On my client's store, it was VERY small and black. I personally did not like it and changed it right away and things got better.

2: Store speed.

If your store takes more than 5 seconds to load when they click your link on Facebook I can promise you that you will lose 50%+ of your customers.

If your store is slow, stop whatever you are doing and fix that issue. On my client's store, it would take 9 SECONDS for a page to load while it would take 1-2 seconds on my store(<https://gyazo.com/48370b5ef25490b4999e8f4ae47722bd>). Having a lot of apps can and will slow your Shopify store.

Don't go and download useless apps. Images....Images from Aliexpress will drastically slow down your store. Try to compress the images and it should increase your store speed.

3: Cart Page

On my client's store, nothing was wrong here but I've seen some stores where the option that forces people to create an account to purchase a product was enabled. He legit had a conversion rate below 1%. He just could not understand why no one was buying. So he contacted me and we found out that no one was buying cause they did not want to create an account. So make sure that option is not enabled in your store.

If you have a PayPal button on your checkout page, you might want to remove it. You should let the customer reach the checkout to pay and not before that. If you don't know how to remove it, there is an app called "Hide PayPal In Cart" that can do it for you.

4: If the first image the customers see once they land on your page is not the product you were advertising or they have to scroll down for a sec to see it, it will also kill your conversion. Make sure that the first thing they see when they land on your page is the product image.

5: Email popups or any kind of popups.

Stop asking customers to give their email the moment they land on your page. Use google analytics to figure out the average time customers leave your store and then...Then you display the popup asking for an email with a discount. They don't know your brand and probably don't feel like giving their email so easily. Once again, this was not the case in my client's store but it's still important to know.

Increasing your Average Order Value(AOV):

This is really important and a lot of you guys are not doing it. You should always upsell and offer bundles on your winning product. On my client's store, he was selling one product at $22.99 and once customers would buy it, he would not upsell them with anything else or even offer a bundle. If you're not doing this, you are leaving a lot of money on the table. If your AOV is $20 and you spend $5 to acquire a customer, if you are able to increase your AOV by $10...20...40, you will be able to spend more money on the front-end to acquire new customers cause your backend is making you more money. On my client's store, he was selling a necklace at $22.99 so what I did is, I upsell the customers with the same exact product but as a ring.

AOV increased to $44(or something like that). Now by doing so, he can spend more on the front end without worrying about losing money.

Retargeting:

Retargeting is the most important thing a marketer can do. It's proven that most customers will not buy the first time they see a product. They need to see it a few times before they decide to buy. On my client's store, he was not retargeting. So those who would not buy the first time they landed on his page would never see the ad again. Retargeting ads will have the highest ROAS. If you are not retargeting right now, then what are you doing?

I'm not going to say how I retarget for obvious reasons but the moment you start to get sales for a certain product, start retargeting.

I may have forgotten some stuff but yeah...That's it. Now go and make some money ?

Edit: If you want some apps for upsell, I recommend Upsell Hero, One Click-Upsell and Carthook.

It is still viable,yes. Woocommerce is another platform you can use but I've never used it so I can't comment on it.

Shopify is pretty easy to use I'll stick to it.

Thank you for the tips!

Not doing Shopify at the moment, planning to start though. First going deep in the theory.

Besides FB Ads, is there any other advertising platform in combination with dropshipping you could recommend?

Without spending an extravagant amount of money (just $30 - $40 / day)...

Thank your for your time.

@squalo Hey bro, I have another question I was thinking about... For people using shopify, When a person pays for a product how do you pay for the other item ? With the your own money or wait for the money to deposit into your account and then purchase the item to be shipped ?... This is something I was wondering, Does shopify do instant deposits so you can pay for a dropshipping product or something ?

You must have money on the side to fulfill the products before Shopify pays you.

Forgot to mention that Shopify pays you once a week if you are outside of the US. So you need enough money to fulfill products for a week until you get paid if you do not live in the US.

Aaaaand if your PayPal account is new they can put all incoming payments on hold for up to 21 days. That can fuck you up pretty bad if you rely on shopify payments to fulfill your products, pay ads, etc.

I got established(?) seller status yesterday, I had those 21 day holds since Feb.

If the customer buy with their credit card instead of PayPal then yes, you can withdraw through your bank. If they use PayPal then it goes through PP and they can hold your money.

If anybody is doubting Squalo's skills with Facebook - you don't know how knowledgeable this guy is.

The most important thing that he has taught me is how to interpret data, break it down, and optimize for it.

Furthermore, he explained how the Facebook pixel actually optimizes your ad (which essentially makes/breaks your advertising process).

Thanks brother - you never really have to help me, but you always do.

When my agency pops off (which is my day-to-day goal), and I need somebody to run Facebook ads, I'm coming straight to you.

No. I've been doing Print On Demand(POD) for a while now. I find it easier to find niches/products/ideas than dropshipping.

It is also a better business model since the quality and shipping time are great.

I also prefer to do POD during this time of the year because customers buy products for their loved as gifts and when it takes 2-3 weeks to ship but Haloween/Christmas/whatever is in 1 week then it does not work LOL.

As long as you have a pixel on your store, you can retarget those people that come from Instagram on FB AND build custom audiences + lookalike from those people and reach new audiences on Facebook.

Give it a try and if you have enough data, you'll be surprised how good it works :).

the average member thinks:

If he helps his client to get there. he can help me too! this is wonderful.

If you just came here to brag about your success, and help.
You would post your success not your client success.

LOL, bro just because someone makes $5000 a day from Shopify doesn't mean that's enough. A lot of people are in debt due to certain reasons such as school or personal matters. It also never stated that $5000 was pure profit. Since you're being such a smart ass, let me show you what I made in the past 2 months while working with Squalo. Is there really a need to go that far just for some proof? LOL

Please don't forget, this is a thread containing information how he helped others which can also help you. There's really no need for us to post proof, it's already nice enough for us to provide anything for people who's causing trouble because of jealousy or such. You guys can trust it and learn from it, or you guys can diss at it like right now and lose your chance to work with him. In the end, it's your lost.

Think carefully and don't forget the whole point of this thread. I'm being generous enough to provide different type of proofs over and over again due to stupid request. In the end, it's all up to yourself. I think I've done enough.

So for starters by reading thorough a few threads I have gotten a feeling that you have helped quite a few members in the community regarding the dropshipping method using Shopify/Facebook ads etc. Let's say im familiar with the way ads work and know my way around Instagram and Facebook ads that i used with some former methods.

I have a few ideas for products that i would try to sell but im not sure exactly how to start. Can u recommend any literature/articles/threads that I could use for collecting valuable info on how to setup everything and maybe indicate common mistakes that people do?

Have in mind that I have read the threads in your signature...

P.S. Im not thinking that I will become a millionaire overnight, or that u will spoonfeed me with info and how/to everything because i know how business works and am willing to learn... just a guy who wants to learn new things and expand my knowledge

Thank u in advance, also i hope we will have opportunity to talk over PM in any way ?

Threads on HF? Hum.. not sure since I haven't seen that many so I can't really recommend anything.

The user "Meow" has a Shopify thread you can read. Other than that, not much you can read here on HF.

Pretty sure the word you are looking for is "Shopify" and not "Spotify". ?

(Apr 5, 2018 04:22 PM)Squalo Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Facebook Ads:

When I first start my ads, I always start with the US but he decided to start with US/Canada/UK/Europe/AUS/NZ. Which is fine, for the most part, but there was a slight problem with that. Facebook was displaying his ads to all those countries but only 3 of them were having the highest ROAS(Return On Ad Spend). Basically, he was spending money on countries that were not converting at all. The issue here is that most people who use Facebook Ads do not actually read their ads data and I've seen it countless of time from users sending me screenshots of their ads manager.

If you do not spend time reading your data and figuring out where you are spending money, you will lose money. So what I did is I break down all his ads by gender, region, country,time of the day,etc and found out that the only countries making him sales were; Canada,US and England. Australia and New-Zealand were working quite too but they were not bringing that much of a ROAS. Then, I found out that the only people from 21-45 were buying his products.

So he was showing ads to people over 45 but they just weren't converting. Then, I found out that he would only get sales from like 3am to 10pm.

So I made new ads with everything I just said and the ROAS was already better. However, even though we were getting traffic, it just was not converting that well. Which brings me to my next point.

According to this, do I need to run fb ads for different countries and times until I find the right combination?

Honestly, if you do US only or US/Canada/Uk/Australia/New Zealand you'll be good.

Usually, I'll just do US but if the audience is too small, I'll do all 5 at once.

Thanks for your reply.

Your suggestion is to make separated ads for each country to keep only those with better conversions?

When testing, you can try all of them in the same ad set. When scaling, if you see that Australia, for example, just doesn't work you can remove it. Or, try it again but this time on its own ad set.

Hey mate,

I'm currently running a store in the dog niche. My ads are performing really well, the clicks are really cheap. I get a lot of visitors from my Facebook ads but zero sales. In total 1k+ visitors already. I really don't know what's going wrong. Is there anyway I can pay you, to help me out?

Thanks.

your offer or targeting is likely the problem.

If you get cheap clicks then next thing you should look at is add to cart(ATC). Do you get ATC? No? Then either the price is high or your store isn't converting.

You get ATC? Yes? See if something on the checkout is wrong.

If you're targeting worldwide then you're probably getting shitty traffic. If you are targeting Tier 1, then something on your store isn't working OR product(like Killua said) isn't good enough for them to actually buy it.

If you are targeting Tier 1, then something on your store isn't working OR product(like Killua said) isn't good enough for them to actually buy it. The ATC rate is really bad. All the traffic is T1. I will drop the price for the product and see if that will change something.

Maybe something is wrong with my design. But I think it's really clean and good looking.

He tested 1 product in 30 days. If that's working your ass off then goodluck :rofl:

Try to get a review from someone who actual put in work and is making money in my mentoring as we speak.

He's gotten his shit together and got back to work now so we'll see how it goes this time :)
