Web Shell Description:

A web shell is a script that can be uploaded to a web server to enable remote administration of the machine. Infected web servers can be either Internet-facing or internal to the network, where the web shell is used to pivot further to internal hosts.

Once successfully uploaded, an adversary can use the web shell to leverage other exploitation techniques to escalate privileges and to issue commands remotely. These commands are directly linked to the privilege and functionality available to the web server and may include the ability to add, delete, and execute files as well as the ability to run shell commands, further executables, or scripts.

mObile has offered me a review copy, please allow 48 hours for a detailed review. However, if this is anything similar to shells that mObile has made in the past I can personally vouch for how well they operate. As for an official Appraisers Review, please give me about 48 hours to complete it.
