Thread: How do i pursue a career in Stone/diamond cutting

L•S•D - April 20, 2018, 8:35 pm

Title says it all, it has been a hobby of mine to make small jewelry out of stones and i have always wanted to be a real jeweler like the person that cuts the diamonds and makes the designs ect.

OP, they're are schools and certified courses you can take to learn this, they have hands on training which is the best way to learn. However it's quite expensive anywhere from 1K Introductory to 40k Complete Course

Why would a forum filled with elite hackers know how to cut stones/diamonds?

find yourself a mentor that'll take you as an apprentice, bring in some of the stones you've worked on and keep nagging at the local jewelers where you live... earn their respect and trust and youll eventually take over the family business

NoneStar - April 20, 2018, 9:32 pm

There's probably courses you can take somewhere to help you.

You should start with learning goldsmithing. Almost all gems are cut in factories and sold wholesale to dealers. Too hard to do without $$$ in equipment.
