

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: How to get a YouTube video removed?

Herald777 - April 22, 2018, 12:22 pm

There is a video footage of me on YouTube. It was posted by a recognized channel (they are a news site with their own TV channel, website and stuff like that). I never agreed to having it posted on YouTube or anywhere on the internet. Is there any way I can get it removed? The video has less than 5000 views btw. How should I go about reporting this?

V O X - April 22, 2018, 12:28 pm

Just report it and provide proof it;s you to youtube, they're legally not allowed to post something of you without consent unless it's a crime story

Herald777 - April 22, 2018, 1:21 pm

(Apr 22, 2018 12:28 PM)V O X Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Just report it and provide proof it;s you to youtube, they're legally not allowed to post something of you without consent unless it's a crime story
But they own the rights to the video. It's not like I can file a copyright complaint.

7and0m - April 23, 2018, 4:17 am

you could open multiple gmail accounts linked to youtube and start reporting, I'm sure people who sell views and likes around here could probably do it for you for a small fee.

Herald777 - April 23, 2018, 5:22 am

(Apr 23, 2018 04:17 AM)7and0m Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) you could open multiple gmail accounts linked to youtube and start reporting, I'm sure people who sell views and likes around here could probably do it for you for a small fee.

How many accounts will it take for YouTube to take action?

Nelphia - April 23, 2018, 6:02 am

Try to find the channel's email and send him an email such as youtube that his video has been reported and he must delete the video, with a spoof email.

Or just try to SE, dox the guy call him on his phone...

Herald777 - April 23, 2018, 7:51 am

(Apr 23, 2018 06:02 AM)Nelphia Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Try to find the channel's email and send him an email such as youtube that his video has been reported and he must delete the video, with a spoof email.

Or just try to SE, dox the guy call him on his phone...

That's the problem though. Their email is not visible on their channel.

saket anand - April 23, 2018, 8:24 am

(Apr 22, 2018 12:22 PM)Herald777 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) There is a video footage of me on YouTube. It was posted by a recognized channel (they are a news site with their own TV channel, website and stuff like that). I never agreed to having it posted on YouTube or anywhere on the internet. Is there any way I can get it removed? The video has less than 5000 views btw. How should I go about reporting this?

Hi,

Report From this Link.

