Thread: Amazon FBA | \$8K First Month

mvmt - May 7, 2018, 9:58 am

Decided to start Amazon FBA in March because a buddy of mine offered to mentor me. I'm always looking for ways to create more income streams so I was down to do it. Already hit $8K in sales after our first month, and that's only with 1 product. Pretty happy with the results so far, this next month I'll be focusing on scaling the store and working on adding my 2nd product. Hit a lot of road bumps on the way so the numbers definitely could've been higher, however it was only the first month so its a learning experience.

Earnings are lower at the end of April because we literally started running out of stock too fast, had to raise the price so we didn't run out lol got a new shipment coming in this week.

Here are some screenshots throughout our progress:

see ya at the next thread of fade vouching for his ass ?

Minus9 - May 7, 2018, 10:09 am

Thank you. It's been good having you as a student. We'll hit $10-12k the month when the shipment arrives!

Indeed, I know Fade knows about his FBA. So why wouldn't I?

Nord. - May 7, 2018, 10:20 am

Wow nice how much time did it take to setup everything??

SIM-2053312 - May 7, 2018, 10:22 am

So why are you selling cheap ebooks if you are making his much? Do you have video proof? How much of this is profit?

1. Dumb question
2. If you don't believe me, then you prob don't know me
3. ~50% on average, depends on PPC spending

Lofti - May 7, 2018, 1:42 pm

The answer to the question "If you're making this much then why are you also doing that?" Will always be: more money, more income streams, more security. Simple. Good job Fade.

Syfer1234 - May 7, 2018, 5:48 pm

so this is like you buy all the shit first and then sell it all back marked up? how much did it cost to get started?

FamousHater - May 7, 2018, 5:51 pm

nice work

see u had no faith. i told u i could teach u how to make money on amazon enjoy the funds.

What does the FBA stand for?

synr - May 7, 2018, 6:00 pm

This is sick, I'd love to invest/get into it.

Exactly, some people can't grasp that concept.

Pretty much, I spent like $1,500 to begin with.

Having multiple sources of income is always better unless the time is not worth it. Modern slaves will never understand that concept working for the money while you can make it in your sleep, shower or party.

I think my customers make more than both of u combined ?

Not Blackhat - May 31, 2018, 10:58 am

Lol all these people hatin' on you because you're selling a good method that actually makes people earn loads.

Meanwhile they're poor as f just browsing this forum all day doing nothing.

AWESOME JOB! Time to scale that up!

MaxoKream - May 31, 2018, 11:05 am

Nice work on the FBA stuff Fade. I'm assuming you got a really nice bundle thats still carrying a nice profit margin? Anyways goodluck with future sales!

FBA or Shopify? I've tried and failed with shopify, and when I say tried I mean tried. I didn't bum it off.

Ive been researching into FBA a lot these past weeks. Amazon is the worlds largest online business, selling on their platform gives me a hard on.

I just started Shopify but this thread is clearly FBA lol I've recently started my own mentorship to teach others about FBA as well.

Completely missed this but I definitely recommend FBA over Shopify. It's a lot easier to tell if you'll have a winning product because you can actually check revenue statistics + amazon is direct to consumer while on Shopify you have to market heavily in order to reach customers.

how much investment money would you recommend in order to start amazon fba?

It really depends on your product's cost, I usually recommend starting with 300-500 units for your first round of inventory. Products can cost you $0.20-$2 per unit, it just depends. Then you have a few other smaller expenses so I usually recommend a budget of around $700.
