

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Tmobile iPhone 6s. Need unlock service

SLY™ - May 8, 2018, 9:30 pm

Hoping someone can provide this service. Phone is clean Imei just don't have access to original account on tmobile ressullhobs - September 12, 2018, 6:29 am

Here is the process to unlock your iPhone from T-Mobile

Follow these steps:

find the online unlocking service provider. I Like to suggest the "Unlockninja Service".They provide the best unlocking service in simple few steps

Just go the portal

Select: Brand Name

Select: Model No and click unlock button

on the next page proceed the steps below:

1) select purchase country and network on which device is locked, your mail id then make payment

2) We will send you login details(Username and Password) for unlockninja.com at the same moment in your mail to update IMEI No

3) Make login and Update IMEI, we will deliver you the code in The least possible time

Reference : "Unlockninja "

Andsworth - October 25, 2018, 3:40 pm

(Sep 12, 2018 06:29 AM)ressullhobs Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Here is the process to unlock your iPhone from T-Mobile

Follow these steps:

find the online unlocking service provider. I Like to suggest the "Unlockninja Service".They provide the best unlocking service in simple few steps

Just go the portal

Select: Brand Name

Select: Model No and click unlock button

on the next page proceed the steps below:

1) select purchase country and network on which device is locked, your mail id then make payment

2) We will send you login details(Username and Password) for unlockninja.com at the same moment in your mail to update IMEI No

3) Make login and Update IMEI, we will deliver you the code in The least possible time

Reference : "Unlockninja "Well the IMEI is largely used for marking a phone as stolen, so you could call the provider or whatever company sold the phone in the first place (Apple; amazon) and say it was stolen. Could also file a police report

Xplainett - October 25, 2018, 6:50 pm

(Oct 25, 2018 03:40 PM)Andsworth Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Well the IMEI is largely used for marking a phone as stolen, so you could call the provider or whatever company sold the phone in the first place (Apple; amazon) and say it was stolen. Could also file a police reportWhy the fuck would he report the phone as stolen?

SIM-2059193 - October 25, 2018, 6:51 pm

(Oct 25, 2018 06:50 PM)Xplainettt Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Why the fuck would he report the phone as stolen? Some companies require you to file a police report to ensure that you're not bullshitting around, the police report is there to help speed up the process.

Xplainettt - October 25, 2018, 6:57 pm

(Oct 25, 2018 06:51 PM)Caractacus Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Some companies require you to file a police report to ensure that you're not bullshitting around, the police report is there to help speed up the process.

Assuming that the police follow up on this?

Most likely scenario is the phone is blacklisted in a pool of millions of others and OP is forever shit out of luck without using s deblacklister service AND an unlocking service to use on different carrier.

By the way you shouldn't need access to original account for unlock, just call T-Mobile and as long as the phone was paid off and the previous account owner isn't in bad standing with T-Mobile then they should help. I have don't this with Verizon years ago before their phones came preunlocked

SIM-2059193 - October 25, 2018, 6:59 pm

(Oct 25, 2018 06:57 PM)Xplainettt Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Assuming that the police follow up on this?

Most likely scenario is the phone is blacklisted in a pool of millions of others and OP is forever shit out of luck without using s deblacklister service AND an unlocking service to use on different carrier.

By the way you shouldn't need access to original account for unlock, just call T-Mobile and as long as the phone was paid off and the previous account owner isn't in bad standing with T-Mobile then they should help. I have don't this with Verizon years ago before their phones came preunlocked

There is always a chance that the police follow up on this, but in all likelihood, unless the person had a clear idea of who stole it or had the right tools, it'll probably be forgotten about. One clear example I can think of is the fact that depending on some purchases, Amazon requires a police report to investigate further if the details are fishy.