Thread: WARNING: I think I may have an impersonator || Don't get scammed!

ToXiiC - May 20, 2018, 11:02 pm

I got this PM yesterday in the morning and forgot to post about it.

I replied to the user Crystallize saying the following:

The user replied to me saying:

This is really saddening news, out of 8 years of business here I definitely know how this feels and I have been there. No one likes getting their money taken by some heartless random online.

Just beware everyone, I only use skype and I don't usually publicly post my skype. Anytime I make a marketplace thread I always have possible clients PM me and if things are going in the right direction I have them add me on skype for faster communication.

Just letting everyone know so they don't end up getting scammed by some heartless shithhead pretending to be me. If you haven't talked to me on HF first then always have me verify myself through an HF PM.

What I usually do with users that I am unsure of is send them some random code like "kjf2ijfo2j3jdfllkwefj" on skype and then ask them to send it to me on HF. I been on HF since I was 13 and I plan on having my account till death, I am never going to be a scammer and am always going to be providing as much quality as I can to other users. Just knowing from experience here, trusted users are bound to get imposters, to be quite honest this is somewhat flattering, I just feel bad for Crystallize.

He's probably still butt hurt he got scammed for $1600 - as would I be.

However, OP is closed, so therefore it was kind of useless, I do agree.
