Thread: a question about \(PHPSSID\) in Cross site scripting vuln

r3el - May 21, 2018, 6:58 pm

i was scanning my target using acunetix then i found Cross site scripting vuln and when i open HTTP editor i found something like this

Code Cookie: PHPSESSID=okgneookt4q3tvi0g74136mbl2; nws_290=1314my question is : this is the cookies of the admin ? if yes , how can i use it

With XSS you are meant to inject it into the server such as on comment forms and such (where when you post data it stays on the website), and your script should post data back to you. So for example you could find a vuln. page, inject your script to that page and direct your victims to the vulnerable page with your malicious code and your script that you make should post data of every user who loads it.

From what you have been saying you have only retrieved your own PHPSESSID. You arent going to do shit with that. Look at my other reply on your threads.
