You would need a shell to be on their localhost...

Not unless you can either bypass a WAF, hack into the server through vulnerable software versions or social engineer the admin.

Noxcrawler - May 26, 2018, 5:43 pm

there a way:

verify if the server has port 3306 open with nmap if so just connect with SQL software to the server & if you have linux in your box then just connect with the command:
mysql -h <your target> -u <username> -p<password(do not leave a space between -p and the password)>

You dont have the database. You said it yourself. You have the localhost login php file which states (LOCALHOST) you havent got shit man... that means that it can only be accessed from within the target network. You aint got shit...

Umm, I know things have changed, now he's just looking for the phpmyadmin path, but initially that dude's advice WAS correct. He has the configuration file which includes database login information. I know you said it states localhost, and it likely isn't possible, but you can swap out localhost as the login and specify the website and also the open SQL port in order to login to the database remotely. ?

Oh, well but if he DOES have the WP-Config, which he initially claims to have, he would be possibly able to do what I mentioned above. ^

Thats right.

But from speaking to OP it just seems like this post was a hoax to get someone to hack the site for him. My observation.

Me too. Dont ask for advice on how to hack a websire then state "if i give you the url : you will get the backup and you can access to the website. it is not safe for me" when he claims hes already got access.... Yeah try again OP

Like i said all along. I wanted the URL to fuzz it for you. But then you keep asking me to hack it for you. Evidence coming since you want to go down that route. Brb.
