They reject the app because of "business conflicts"

Look Apple. If people buy your phone, they now own the phone, they should be able to do what they want with it. It's why I use android. Android may be laggier but you can do what you want with it, on any device.

Apple only care about themselves and money. They don't even think about the consumer.

Seife?r - May 26, 2018, 3:15 am

I used to work as a ios port game developer, they reject apps all the time for really strange reasons, they once rejected an app because it was too similar to another game.... that game being the prequel to the game rejected xD

Seriously fuck ios~

However valve is most likely going to just swing its huge cock and have this fixed fairly quickly.

I mean, they're a private company.

You can jailbreak the iPhone without even using a computer, and get access to /root. I can do whatever I want with my iPhone... It's not a bad phone. I have it for everyday use; phone calls, texts, etc... and I use my android for apps, hacked pandora, etc... One is not necessarily better than the other.

I thought the only way to jailbreak without a pc is in the iOS 4 days.

And I had a jailbroken iPod and it was an absolute pain in the ass to install anything. Half the time a decent app didn't exist for what I wanted to do. The jailbreak caused way too many issues, such as an extremely slow device, frequent crashes, etc. Never had something like that on an android (other than the extremely low end ones from 2012.)

Android is just much easier to use IMO. I would use iOS, I just don't because it is owned by Apple.

Cammy - May 27, 2018, 7:27 am

Android and Apple cater to different people

I don't like the "just works" ecosystem so give me an Android where I can already change a lot of things to my own likings without the need for root access
Also apple devices are overpriced as fuck.

Justin - May 27, 2018, 7:32 am

Apple is overpriced, I had an iPhone 7 32GB and I liked it a lot, but because of the notifications and little things, I ditched it for the Galaxy S8.

Now I'm really considering an iPhone as my next phone when I'll switch from this S8.

EDIT: I said it's overpriced, which is bad, but to be honest the smoothness of the OS and the clean look makes it amazing.

My experience with Androids is that they start becoming laggy over time. (after ~4months)

But it's not worth it, even for the smoothness. My android phones lag as soon as I take it out the box. I miss the Android KitKat days. Google has ruined the OS in terms of performance but I'd still use it over iOS.

If you go to www.appvalley.vip and install AppValley, then go to Settings->Profiles->Trust Developer, you can install hacked apps including Elektra.

You HAVE to use itunes, which is the biggest pain in the ass.

When you sync you have to have the music on your computer and the phone, if you remove it from the computer it will be removed from the phone too (WTF)

Luckily, that shit can be bypassed using Copytrans, but I shouldn't have to use a third party app.

On android, it's as simple as dragging any type of music or video file to the phones storage, exactly the same as doing it to a flash drive. The music and video apps on the phone automatically detect these and you can play it easily.

Downloading files are a pain in the ass because it doesn't give you a progress bar, so you don't even know if it's downloading or not, and usually you can't even open the file because none of the apps support it, or you can't find the file because it's not in an obvious place and you have to jailbreak it and buy ifile.

Android, all your downloads are in "Downloads", it gives you a progress bar, you can easily find it, delete it, modify it, move it, do whatever you want just like a PC.

This is why I hate iOS, it's a PAIN IN THE ASS and it doesn't "just work".

Android is simpler.

Android is more like a PC, and PC users will feel right at home, making it more useful and easier to use for older people who are more used to desktop computers.

Spotify is trash quality. Even on ultra quality it still sounds worse than even youtube...

Downloading music will always be #1 for quality. Though I have been using netease music which is much better than spotify and is free.

Anyway I'm not talking about music streaming, i'm talking about local music. Many people still want to listen to music without internet access or music subscription.

Doubt it.

Apple offers supreme support. Any issue you have device will be replaced, or fixed free of charge without hassle.

The iPhone 6 still runs exactly the same. Batteries don't go bad in a "couple of months." You're overexaggerating everything.

What you really mean.

"Bad support" --> never had to use support

"runs twice as bad" --> runs exactly as he bought it

"battery going bad" --> forgets to charge device at night like everything else.

I completely agree with all of this, except Android is not laggy. It's things like MIUI, EMUI, Samsung Experience, LGUX, etc. that are laggy. If you've ever used stock Android, like on a Pixel or OnePlus device, it's almost as fast as iOS. A good portion of the stuff I have on my Android phone is either impossible on iOS or requires jailbreak.

Well, it's not too bad but it's not as fluent as my desktop PC or anything.
