If the rumors turn out to be true and this is another online RPG with absolutely no singleplayer option like the elder scrolls online which requires you to pay a monthly fee in order to continue online play, I'm not going to bother with it.

But if online play is free, with an optional microtransaction system to compensate, then I'll definitely be checking it out!

Best-case-scenario is that this is a singleplayer RPG with an optional multiplayer function.

TES VI isn't expected until after 2020.

But ESO doesn't require a monthly sub and hasn't for years.

Really? I didn't know that because I've never played it.

I thought that ESO was like WOW where you have to pay monthly.

Im just hoping that its a single-player game with Multiplayer/Co-Op as an option and be able to use external mods such as ones from Nexus Mods.

I hate to say it but Creation Club for Fallout 4 has ruined Fallout m4 for me and I would hate to see Bethesda force only CC mods on Fallout 76.

And if it is strictly an online game (or you have to be connected to the internet, yes Im looking at you SimCity 2013) I will pass and wait till the next Fallout comes out.

I'm just hoping what ever kind of game it is that its a great game I can either play by myself or with friends. I wouldn't mind an online RPG I just don't see them taking the subscription route esp with all these companies making bank right now with micros as long as it is cosmetics mostly I'm fine tho really.

I had a gut feeling after the release of Fallout 4 that there would eventually be a spinoff game, much like what New Vegas was to Fallout 3.

The Fallout franchise still has a huge fanbase.
