Thread: Give me FAT Feedback

Faith Connors - May 30, 2018, 8:12 pm

I want the fattest feedback you can give me on my site.

I'm using visual composer for most of this and it's working quite nicely, but I feel like there are definitely things that are off about the site. I just can't seem to put my finger on it, or at least what could make it better.

That's why I need your help. Rip my design to shreds, tell me what needs to be glassed. I want this to look absolutely beautiful.

Don't forget to tell me what looks pretty, I do need the ego boost every now and then too :)

NOTE: Focus on design, I'm going to rewrite some of the content anyway, as well as add more pages to the navigation part (tos, privacy policy, etc.)

(Cloudflare is propagating, https should be up in the next day.)

its nice and simple but I think you can make it nicer to your niche/subject, as you are a writer I think you should make it more homely with a shop so users can buy directly and request work/upload work through a portal.

If you need some help HMU.

in regards to above, i dont like the ecommerce option as i like to talk about the job im taking on. i'm a single person, not a company of ten. i can't afford to take like 5 jobs at once on top of my fulltime. i need to be able to talk to people to work out what they want, a simple email doesn't actually cut it. turning down work isn't a huge rarity (albeit still pretty uncommon, but i've done it a few times.)

so ye, not throwing woocommerce on this B lmao

I simply don't like the design, it doesnt really have any professional feeling at all.

- Also i would change the font in your menu because its not very appealing, and kinda childish.
- You need to work on your Scaling, and your ratios.
- Your segmentation is really bad and not SEO friendly.
- Why is your whole sites text centered, makes no sense as you are appealing to "writing" services, and also bigger chunks of text should be aligned left - basic UX stuff.
- You need some call to action since you are trying to promote a service, and with the current state, most people would find another provider.

I would remake everything basicly, do a wireframe, then a mock-up and then build the site.

- Take a look at your competition, or atleast some modern sites, and get some ideas.

I would simply give this site 3/10.

Started making a review about individual parts about it (wrong icon set, wrong spacing, wrong color combo's), but on second thought, I totally agree with this user's reply.

Edit: something positive: I like the green/black-grey combo on hover in the sidebar.

I like your writing skills, but your site does not seem to match it.

Change font, and color, as well as layout.

I care more about what I'm buying than the site design. Look at that pricing! Matter of fact, I'll be contacting you soon for some work. I've actually been looking for a content writer. How busy are you usually?
