New socks added and we are estimating that the final stable version of our program will be released tomorrow.

SIM-3326956 - June 2, 2018, 5:38 pm

Ok here is my honest review of anonsocks. So I got the program and some socks credits from juffar and logged in fine the ui is pretty clean and simple to use one thing i liked a lot about it is the fact that you can pick exact cities and states that you want for the proxies one thing I wish that could be changed is that the states, countries and cities were all organized in alphabetical order for the filter it would make things a bit easier. the first proxy I connected to worked fine and was pretty fast and had no problems with it. When I tried connecting to the second proxy the program lagged a bit and i clicked a few more times to connect to it and it connected after a while but the problem about that was because I clicked more then once it ended up using all my credits so if you could add an option for it to ask if you are sure if you want to connect to this proxy that would be a lot better so users can avoid accidentally using up all of their credits. over all if I didn't run into any of those issues i'd say for the price this is a great product and everything else worked perfectly fine.

(Jun 5, 2018 06:24 AM)Polatic Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I got a vouch copy from OP's previous thread so here's my review:

The program is really well-made. I had some questions about the program and I got answered within like 5 minutes which is great.

The only thing that I think could get improved is the fact that the proxies are not bound to your account, so when you close the program you will not be able to see the proxies you've bought unless you noted them down in notepad or anything. It's not too big of a deal but it could be improved on!

The proxy prices are really cheap aswell. I haven't tried them fully, but if I like them I will definitely come back to buy again!

Thank you for the honest review!

I purchased this software a few days ago and the quality and speed of the proxies are so much better than their competitors as VIP72 and luxsocks. I have never encountered a problem using these proxies and they are always residential and not database that sometimes happen when you are using other providers. 10/10, would recommend.

Glad to hear that. At the moment, all the socks are shared between all users. Purchase failed means that the socks that you tried to purchase is (currently) offline.

interesting service ! I need to socks

Juffar - June 28, 2018, 4:42 am

We now charge 25% more when paying with paypal and payments by paypal will be manually reviewed. For a smooth transaction please buy with crypto currencies.

Juffar - June 29, 2018, 7:19 am

We removed the required manually inspection for Paypal payments so it's automated again but we will still keep the +25% fee.

How you gonna call this anonymous when you use home connections to tunnel traffic through unencrypted channels?

This is heavily vuln to MITM attacks and is def not anonymous.

Good luck with sales.

Also just paid for the 1st package, I refreshed the page and now it's gone. Don't tell me my money is gone now (if so you seriously need to upgrade your shit). Where's my socks bro?

Yes correct. They will last a few hours up to a few days on average but may last shorter or even up to weeks.

We have both a web version and a desktop version. Some users prefer the desktop version because it's very easy to use. You are not required to use our desktop version. We have enough vouchers and our pricing is from only $1.49 so no.

Had a payment error when purchasing 30 Socks via BTC looking for support. ?

Unimagined - July 29, 2018, 2:03 am

I do not recommend purchasing this service.

I bought 100 proxies.

I found this service to be a scam.

Here is why:

1. They are not long-lasting.

On Average I get 3-6 hours out of one. Sometimes a day. Not one has lasted more than 2 days, and I've gone through 30 of them now.

The OP claims that "long-lasting" is subjective. So 1/4th of a day on average isn't long-lasting is my subjective opinion? Ridiculous, and just a cop out. False Advertising.

2. Many of the ones that are apparently not blacklisted, are in fact blacklisted.

3. Probably 8 times now out of my 30 purchased proxies, I've received the same proxy. Same IP:Port. Even right after I purchased that exact one.

4. When I contacted the OP about my concerns, I was disregarded, and told that what I am experiencing is acceptable. Terrible support.

If I wanted to prove this I could by recording my PC, and doing tons of other stuff. But I cbf to do any of that over a 10$ purchase, so I'm leaving this review instead.

We appreciate your honest opinion, it's unfortunate that you seem to be the only customer with these issues.

The last-time, as I told you in PM, is described as "long-lasting" after we compared it with our competitors such as VIP72.

In your private messages you never mentioned that you had received the same ip:port for different socks. Please message me your username again and I'll add 50 socks to your account.

We determinate the blacklist status by searching the IP in databases that we have access to. There are extremely many spam-databases and we don't have access to them all so it's possible that it might be blacklisted in one less known database that we don't know of.

I used whatismyipaddress.com blacklist checker.

I mean if 3-6 hours is long-lasting, then that should at least be stated. I wasted my time buying this.

We don't keep any logs like that for our customers safety. If you're using the web version you need to copy the IP:Port right away.

If you're using the desktop client you can see your History for the session (until you close the client down).

What do you mean by that? Nowhere have we stated that they aren't shared between our customers. This is how services/sites like this usually works.

You can't really think that for this pricing you'd get dedicated non-shared residential socks5. Our competitors like VIP72 is shared as well and they have a far higher pricing.

Perhaps you should get some more information about our service before trying to trash our sales-thread.

We update our socks automatically every 2 minutes and before you activate a socks you have the option to see if it's blacklisted or not.

or perhaps you should not dupe customers into buying if they not aware they are shared as if u admitted it in thread design they were then the guy above wouldnt of had to get u to admit they are shared cause he would of already known they are since u put that info in thread design right...

looks like you were trying to hide that fact as most sites who sell proxies like you do not share proxies as would defeat the purpose of buying them. as i can go get a free list off the web if u want a shared list of sock proxies lmao

There were never anything to "admit". We haven't stated that they are shared or un-shared so if someone purchases and believes that they are not shared then that's not my problem.

I won't even continue to argue with you as you don't even understand the difference between the socks that we are selling here and free public shared socks.

That depends what you mean by static. The IP's are static (not dynamic) and the socks (proxies) lasts anywhere from less than a few hours up to a a few weeks. They last a few days on average.

You can choose the speed "Fast" the websites loading time will usually not be noticeable affected.

They might have the same IP but not the same port, this is because we tunnel all connections through a server (hence why the connection is encrypted).

If you're saying that 10/10 socks are dead then it's something on your end as the socks are checked (and removed if offline) once you activate them. Contact me and I'll help you out.

What does what display? It depends but if it's the anonymity level you're talking about you might not know that it depends on other things than just the proxy/socks.

Anyway, here's mine now:

Let me explain, its a stellar system I am not complaining at all. All I am saying is, I have used many other sites and they don't have a system like this, they simply give you the IP as displayed thus I presumed this would be the same. Now I was clicking "Buy" on the proxies and I continued to get the same 192 IP address, I was checking the location of the IP and every time it was coming back as a datacenter IP in the US. I thought it was a bug, so I continued to keep buying IP's until I actually realised, connected to one and thus forth noticed the public IP was different to the connection IP. Silly yes, but I was just not thinking.

I have PM'ed you my username, thank you.

PayPal is only accepted if you have already made purchases of $1000+ using crypto currencies or Perfect Money.

A residential IP is a IP address that looks like a normal "home IP". Normally, VPN's and Proxies gives you a datacenter IP.

Yes but there is also a detailed Proxifier guide on the website. I'm sure you will find the answer to all your questions by checking the website.

The socks list is updated multiple times every day. If it's blacklisted it means that it's been found in one of the blacklist databases that we check (this could mean the IP has been reported for things like spamming).

Only socks5 but by using Proxifier you can make any application go through the socks5 even if it's not supported in the application. Guide/Tutorial: <https://anonsocks.us/guides/proxifier.php>
