Description:

Pronouncer owes me $24.99 for his copy of Easy Money Platinum Package.

He has a copy of this HF product without having actually paid for it. He's then using this as his evidence for his fake deal dispute on me.

After being asked whether or not it was his copied, he admitted to it by saying trying to insult me:

(Jun 8, 2018 06:08 AM)Pronouncer Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) and why do i owe you anything when both your ebooks contain stolen content.

The latter part of that statement is blatantly false. The former part, however, is an admission that he has a copy.

This will be resolved as soon as I receive the $24.99 owed for his copy of Easy Money Platinum Package. Which he stole.

Here's proof he has stolen it off me:

Now: he either has the guide, in which he owes me $24.99 (but he's admitted to this) for OR he's basing his deal dispute thread off fake evidence that he doesn't have.

If you're going to talk shit, at least your information correct. This is a book with close to 50 pages of great information on how to make money.

Buy the book to see what's actually going on, or I will report your comments for mere sales trashing. There's no repackaging anything. These are new methods, which invertebrate snake-oil salesmen like yourself wouldn't know about, because you're too busy promoting lies rather than the facts like I am.

I bought his previous ebook because he was talking so much shit so I wanted to prove him wrong, sure enough it was all public info. You can't "leak" something that's already public, I already posted a CA on this fool but I think he's just trolling at this point.

Why not use this logic against the man who claims to make $500 a day? Why has he spent hours chasing after $35 and why can't he pay $25 for the copy he stole?

I'm not actually under obligation to refund his money, because he hasn't been scammed. I will consider doing a refund out of the good of my heart if he pays me $25.

Because it's $35 he wasted on public information, which you seem to call private, he stole nothing, what if he received the eBook from someone else, then Pronouncer is not the one you should call a stealer, it is the one who leaked it and yourself for stealing public methods and then claiming it as your own.

That's not 'this' logic, that's Pronouncer wanting to receive his money back that he spend on a 'Private' method that is not private.

43 is not close to 50, it's close to 40.

As Pronouncer claims, half of the pages are blank thus not containing information, which means you would have around 20-23 pages of information which is closer to 20 than to 50.

I highly doubt Pronouncer cares enough about $35 to even log into his Paypal to check if he received it. But it seems like Techius did a pretty good job at destroying his reputation, credibility and sales by making this thread, which I'm sure Pronouncer is happy with.

Yes I'm aware of that concept don't think it applies to your product but whatever you say. So are you going to post proof he didn't pay for your product or what? Because this thread is invalid without any sort of proof. Also btw your first page isn't proof he didn't pay. He posted proof he did pay in the second post. Seems you mishandled your docs and gave him both editions.

Techius - June 18, 2018, 8:19 am

The proof is that he claims to own Easy Money Platinum Package (which is what he's basing his fake deal dispute on). He even admitted to owning it:

He's talking about "owning" Easy Money Platinum Package & Platinum Bank (which he paid for).

This deal dispute is over him not paying me for his copy of Easy Money Platinum Package, which costs $24.99 + 10% interest (compounding) + 10 days this dispute has been open... so $49.98.

This is the part in which I'd tell you to stop bitching on a forum post and go submit the relevant information with the involved parties for a DMCA takedown request. But then, all you know is that he has a copy.

He hasn't shared a full copy of your work, he has shared censored snippets as a way of proof and a script which I've also found on multiple other websites.

So how exactly are you invoking a claim of copyright? If someone see's my site logo, should I flip out and start threatening everyone who has seen it via copyright?

You have an invalid dispute and an invalid copyright claim, else fuck off this thread and go get some notices sent.

Because he has a product of mine (which I have inherent copyright) on which he hasn't paid for (stealing).

What you fail to take note of is the difference between a paid product/service which you have no permission to own & share and something that's designed to be public but is still owned by a business. A website logo falls into the latter category. A paid product or service falls into the latter.

If you're going to try argue about legal concepts, you have to understand all of the perspectives you can't even begin to comprehend. This results in people like you posting thinking you're a genius.

And again, WHO are you going to submit letters to for him to be punished?

(Jun 18, 2018 08:26 AM)Techius Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I didn't know we were going off your authority for what is valid and invalid.

I've dealt with my fair share of copyright claims, which is usually as simple as me contacting hosting providers with a notice for content removal. (For example, if a user monetises one of my logos without permission- or starts re-hosting content that I have created, or distributing it on platforms without my consent.

Who are you? But a whiny little kid who can't even use simple logic.

Even if this WAS a valid dispute, absolutely NO legal action can be taken based on the evidence presented.

And nobody is going to listen to you crying about someone stealing your method to steal from horny men.

In this instance, any grounds for copyright action could only result in the removal of the censored images. In which case, you would have to contact the image host with a "waaah, this guy has a censored version of my content.", which would be ignored.

Furthermore, what category of copyrighted works does your eWhoring guide fall under?

It's a tutorial/guide, you cannot copyright those you fucking idiot.

"Pronouncer owes me $24.99 for his copy of Easy Money Platinum Package. "

Hmmm? You owe me $35. You could just send me 10 back isn't that more logical. Unless maybe you can't afford that?

Techius - July 26, 2018, 9:12 am

I can afford any number. We can get into the thousands, and I can afford anything.

Why can't you repay $50 (which could be reduced further)? I thought you made $500/day? $50 is a drop in the bucket in the grand scheme of things.

The only crying is coming from you trying to defend your mate. This isn't your deal dispute. This is you interjecting when nobody called on you to participate.

It's clear you don't understand the context of this thread. You seem to have no understanding of finances. This can be demonstrated when you compare me to a drug dealer. dude weed lmfao.

When you stop doing drugs, get off the benefit, and experience the real world; you will see that your comparison to being a drug dealer is fucking stupid. It's not your fault. You don't have a better comparison because you're unable to think of one because of your life experience being so dull.

It's apparent that the only coherent and intelligent person in this thread is me. I have high emotional intelligence. If I was emotionally invested in this thread, to the point of crying, I definitely wouldn't be doing laps on both you and Pronouncer.

It's quite sad to see that these are probably the best people millennials have to offer. Indoctrination into dumbing down an entire generation has terrible effects. When the benchmark is Eccy and Pronouncer, you know we're fucked!

There's nothing complicated or intelligent about the word "fiction"? It's a simple word that you should have learned in year 3. If you think that using the word "fiction" makes people sound intelligent, then you have a lot to learn about the world.

Why are you reverting to ad-hominem attacks? You're trying to attack my character. Why are you prolonging the inevitable admission of "I'm wrong"? Attacking my character, rather than the argument, is a horrible way of trying to do things, especially in the deal dispute section. You're not a third party at all. You're part of Terminal. My idea of a third party isn't a person who takes sides. I guess your slanted perception doesn't see it that way though. I guess this demonstrates that you're not "100% there", like any other Terminal member.

Being stubborn != being right

Also he's not deactivated he's exiled. That means it isn't permanent

Pronouncer is still in arrears to me. He owes me a lot of money at this point!

Get back to me. You owe me, broke boy.
