Thread: Asking for Reputations

Omniscient - June 11, 2018, 6:41 pm

Since reps are now canned and unrelated to the Marketplace we can make policy changes.

7. You cannot ask for or offer reputation in posts, signatures, or PM. This includes encouragement like "rep is appreciated".

That's gone. Ask for all the reputations you want.

<https://hackforums.net/misc.php?action=help&hid=20>

That's changed to reflect new policies about abuse. We no longer need to worry about invalid scammer reps, abuse, threats, harassment, doxing and a number of other reputation related issues.

So if you want to ask for reps then go for it. Profile policy does still disallow setting "site goals" though. So saying "trying to earn 1000 reps" isn't allowed.

I raised rep giving limit from 5 to 10 earlier today but I feel like it's appropriate to increase it more.

L33t will stay at 10 but Ub3r are now 25 reps per day. Also setting it so Ub3r can delete their given reps.

Enjoy.

This will be interesting. Rep farming groups may be big time here - but I think this new policy change does make the most sense given recent developments ;)

So could you better explain to me why the removal of existing reputation?

Also rep was pretty much the only reason I did anything on this site. Like I wouldn't ask for rep. But I knew that if I helped others they would leave me a rep and let me know how much they appreciated it. I guess the biggest difference with me was I never scam.

That sucks. I know I can't be the only one though that feels like it was a kick in the balls to get rep reset. I mean I guess rep doesn't matter that much anymore to some of the newer members but I do know that for many years rep was something you grind for to earn. Not something you just got. Either way, I'll be here for another 6 years learning and sometimes helping people lol.

Menalix - June 11, 2018, 7:24 pm

Lol?

I was FINE with the rep reset, never gained more than 700 anyway, I'm not a lounge guy. But this is a wierd AF decision.

Why is the only positive canned selection "High quality member" when you can just ask/beg for rep, rather than perform HQ content.

Now I'm satisfied with, that I managed to delete 25-50 threads of my code publishments used by various of crypter and malware devs in their copy-paste projects.

I used to feel ashamed deleting all my HQ work, but it seems that I shouldn't.

It IS NOT about delivering HQ content anymore, it is now officially a playground for kids and trolls and then there's a marketplace.

You have my thanks for almost great 10 years though.

I completely agree. These last two years have felt like a downhill slide. I miss the years where my noob ass could actually meet someone that knows something and learn from them and build a relationship with them. Now most of the people I talk too don't even use HF anymore. Too much of a literal word for word "playground for kids". So you aren't the only person that has had this view.

Ye he actually used to care about the content on this forum. Now he only cares about the marketplace. Like this is ever gonna be the new ebay or amazon anyways.... tsh.

Back in the days, there were several of niche hacking forums competing for an audience. 2006-2009'ish.

Omniscient created this as an universal site where the whole audience could fit, and he beated every shitty niche forum there was. He did not do a great job, but a perfect job.

There's so many sites I could mention back forum 2006-2009, who closed due to Hackforums dominance for the audience.

And now he just wants to run a marketplace, and couldn't give a shit about the rest.

I officially do not care about rep since you banned me with 500 rep. I know my account was compromised for like 12 hours but no one was scammed and I PM'ed staff right away. The account I built on here I can never compete with again. I can never make up 500 rep without boosting it, or be built in 2011. People do giveaways or cheap sales for rep which is the same exact thing as asking. I didn't get 430 + rep on my uber by being nice. I got it by doing deals and by giving away free items to people that could rep me.

Quote:whats the point of reputation now?

I got a serious question for members. Before HF has anyone ever heard of a forum that disallowed asking for reputations? I never did. And I really only added it because of our Marketplace. And reputations on HF were previously only important due to marketplace abuse. So now that reps aren't linked to the market it's not really a threat to the community and can revert to its original intent. Which is how well you're liked, loved, or hated in the community based probably on your style of posting and helpfulness to others. Reps are no longer about vouching for your buddies (or strangers) just so they can appear credible in the market.

The reputation system should be fun and about helpfulness to the community. That's going to be the intent and purpose of any changes I make going forward concerning reps.

Quote:Exactly , now noone be afraid shit posting or Malicious file spreading because they don't fucking care about a -3 rep is useless now

That's dumb. You report the post and the member will get a closed account. That has nothing to do with reps, never did. Reports has an actual "infected" reason.

Having marketplace related reputations would be meaningless with the contract system being implemented. It was a good move to reset the reputations and keeping marketplace related reputations out of it this time.

Eventually this rep4rep thing will be sorted and reps wont be thrown around as much again and people will start giving reputation to people they genuinely find helpful or interesting.

Was just gonna say how is that going to be regulated? People probably trading reps for positive contracts now via pm in the shadows. Also now people are selling rep so if there are positive contracts spammed due to that how can that same user be trusted with up to 1k dollars of someones cash? This all stinks badly.

Well just saying but if you wanted to reset the reputation it's fine but why allow buying reps and other members sending pm stuff? Forum looks totally low quality via those rules i guess. Just my opinion.

Now i can see sites like addmefast and like4like adding hackforums rep 4 rep.

No. HF does not reset individual member reputation for any reason. Keep that in mind when you interact with members on the forum. Thank you for raising the rep for upgraded members.

I know that a similar thread was made about R3KT and this is all up to Omniscient to decide about at the end of the day, but the reputation requirement for UB3R (25 positive rep.) plays no importance nowadays due to the recent changes.

That's gone. Ask for all the reputations you want.

<https://hackforums.net/misc.php?action=help&hid=20>

That's changed to reflect new policies about abuse. We no longer need to worry about invalid scammer reps, abuse, threats, harassment, doxing and a number of other reputation related issues.

So if you want to ask for reps then go for it. Profile policy does still disallow setting "site goals" though. So saying "trying to earn 1000 reps" isn't allowed.

I raised rep giving limit from 5 to 10 earlier today but I feel like it's appropriate to increase it more.

The Pact - June 12, 2018, 6:56 am

I just saw in extras a bunch of people were banned for spamming PMs I checked because someone who had PMed me for Rep that I was talking to I suddenly couldn't reply to him.

Anyway rep me I guess I keep thinking my 521 is going to reappear but I guess not.

Is Omni saying F You to a bunch of people on the bans list because they complained about the changes?

Most people have happily accepted all the changes Omni wanted to make to the site but this is.....an extreme one. I always thought resetting all neg rep would be a thing that would thrill all his customers because so much neg rep was from people banned for trolling anyway but this is.....not that.

A quick couple reminders.

1. We don't allow LQP on HF. So if you're making a thread asking for rep. It will get closed and you'll be warned. Thread may get junked too.

2. If you're making requests for reps via posts in random threads this is also LQP. In which case again you may get warned or even banned for doing so.

These are existing policies already. Obviously we allowed members to blow off some steam the past 12+ hours but get it under control. The LQP stops now.
