Good luck sorting this out! He might just need to get the boot if you ask me.

Word of advice. Check the UID before dealing with anyone. If you still don't feel comfortable is a MM

Because this forum has given a complete free hand to scammers. And if you'd try to speak about them loudly, then their co-partners or with same mindset people will reward you with negative reputations (Just look at the right side of my user and you'll notice it)

I've been scammed by the guy which is having 2200+ posts and 118+ reputation numbers, and I'm going to post the complete detail in a while along with proofs. But I'm also dead sure that no one will give a F here, and he'll continue doing this with other members too. Because all it needs a BLUE, YELLOW or JESUS profile status to start this scamming journey here.
