Would love to know where he buys them lol, or maybe other people just buy them and put them on his account who knows.

Or maybe it was the russian hackers.

29% of hillary's are fake

Followbros - June 25, 2018, 9:38 am

TwitterAudit

Grim - June 25, 2018, 9:56 am

Not just trump a lot of celebrity followers are fake nothing new there. I would assume his social media team bought them?

Black Hat - June 25, 2018, 9:57 am

Just did hillary's too

She has a lot more fakes than trump 29% of hers are fake that's almost 1/3

JoshAllen - June 25, 2018, 10:07 am

The reason why big figures have so many active followers, is because when someone signs up for twitter, twitter sends you to a screen with people you are recommended to follow so a lot of people just click the "follow all" button then give you.

This is before you add a profile picture or bio. A lot of people after signing up, don't bother coming back.

These programs that do audits, look for accounts with profile pictures and bios to see if they are real.

There are also services on HF that offer HQ followers which show up as real. I have seen accounts botted with 100k and they get around a 90% rating.

It's honestly stupid that people are like OMG they faked their followers for fame from this result Shane Dawson made a video about it recently.

I get what you are saying but that doesn't explain the disparity in their numbers, using that logic would mean that hillary clintons followers are less likely to have a profile picture and bio which really doesn't make sense...

Ozone - June 25, 2018, 10:16 am

Is there some site too to check FB fake follower ?

Never used facebook, but maybe check google.

He goes on Hack Forums, probably one of the ub3r shit posters.

Omniscient - June 25, 2018, 10:20 am

What do you think the average amount of fake followers any major company or celebrity figure has? I'd like to compare that against those numbers. Because imho the fake follower Trump has seems inline with what everyone probably has but Clintons appears to be excessive.

Good point, I often get random bots following me on social media. Doubt he could block them all himself

So my organic twitter has around 3% fake followers out of 10.2k followers if that's anything to go off - I've never purchased fake followers so I'm guessing they are either spam bots or false positives.

I could actually see Hillary supporters buying fake followers for her so that they could try to catch up with trump. A lot of them are really passionate about her.

Omniscient - June 25, 2018, 10:44 am

The HF Twitter account says I have 55% real but I've never purchased fake followers or encouraged anyone to grant them to me. I believe bots may follow our Twitter account anyways.

Just saying that these audits don't mean very much imho.

But you could always look at this way, how many people on HF have offered these services and thought to themselves "I'll give the HF twitter a bit of free growth".

Seems fairly plausible that some if not a few people have done this.

Probably someone loaded bunch of fake followers to Trump just because he hates him.

Most "fake" accounts are usually just inactive. Those things are never accurate.

Redrum - July 27, 2018, 8:10 pm

How does it declare "real" followers from fake ones? lol seems like a load of bs to me

Vince - July 27, 2018, 10:52 pm andddddddddd 100% of us give no shit about their twitter followers.

They are both idiotic politicians who do nothing to help this nation.

Jay - July 28, 2018, 12:23 am

To be honest... all of these sites are straight BS and even if they aren't, it's probably wrong most of the time.

I'm sure donald trump doesn't buy any followers nor does hillary... pretty sure they count inactive accounts as "fake" followers.

Account of the Gods - July 28, 2018, 12:29 am didnt hillary pay people to vote for her anyway

If this was the case then why doesn't the average user have large amounts of inactive followers, my twitter account is quite old.

luke - July 28, 2018, 2:12 pm

Pretty bullshit stats. The "fake followers" could just be people who have set up a Twitter account and don't really use it.

This - it really depends on how they decide an account to be fake.

DenizZ - July 28, 2018, 5:55 pm

Fake news. That's all I can say.

GloryToBe - August 7, 2018, 9:41 pm

I don't understand why this would matter, all popular twitter accounts have bots, some more than others.

Complicatedsomebody1 - August 14, 2018, 3:41 pm

I think its true he bought the followers..maybe fake sure but some things might be more relevant that others when making a political conclusion ?

MrArchiveTemp - August 15, 2018, 11:12 am

I honestly doubt he buys his own followers, it's probably people who are bored or people who support him and funnel them through to his Twitter. Hillary on the other count, I can believe it.

XDDDev - August 15, 2018, 11:13 am

True! His social media outburst and rampages have brought on millions of followers and gained international attention, he knows exactly how to play the game and he's WINNING.

FawkCidy - December 22, 2018, 9:41 am

It's pretty easy to buy other people fake followers.

Fake news

Spoiler \(Click to View\) hehe

Mix - December 22, 2018, 9:33 pm

No one really likes Hillary any who

CyberStrike - December 22, 2018, 10:03 pm

These are two very important people, and very polarizing figures. It's a rather simple reason Hillary has more, because she has less followers. Why not have several fake .. bots to follow these two whatever polarizing tweets they tweet 1000 bots retweet, and give which ever person more visibility, and thus reach more people. If there is say an issue on which both of these people are posting about or have posted about, retweet and make the divide larger, you are neither for nor against, but you divide the enemy. By polarizing the issues from both of these people and leave it where politically they are unable or unwilling to act.

Hillary is not really relevant any further since 2000 she has been trying to angle for a Presidency, yet to most of America she is unlikable, but still some percentage of Americans dislike the current President. So to these people Hillary lost but is the rightful winner.( I am neither Republican nor Democrat I am a strict Constitutionalist and American.)
