Thread: [Police shoot kid and dog in face because dog barked. \[Not graphic\]](#)

Black Hat - June 25, 2018, 5:46 pm

This video fucking annoys me, this cop disregards a child's life all because a dog barked at the police who intruded on the families home. Shot the dog fucking hit the kid in the face somehow I imagine that it was a ricochet or shrapnel of some sort because the child probably would have been dead.

But who in the fucking right mind would discharge their firearm at a dog while a child is sat right behind it, this officer should be fired for lack of a fucking brain, fuck that actually send the fucker to prison... "Attacked by a dog" lol

Wake - June 25, 2018, 5:59 pm

Dog barks at strangers In his home gets shot? Dog was probably trying to scare away strangers In his house to protect children/family. No words for the police officer either discharged a fire arm right next to a child could have easily gone worse then It did.

I know right, it's fucking stupid just found this article on the case too there is an interview with the girl's mother <http://www.kansas.com/latest-news/article207093564.html> I think the dog actually lived too that's how bad his fucking aim was.

Oh look wichita is on the news again after fucking up on the swatting incident. This PD has more drama than LAPD and NYPD combined.

Armada - June 25, 2018, 6:38 pm

New cop, lack of experience, faced with a critical situation, I can understand the officers panic, but none the less, they are suppose to be VETTED for this scenario.

I had a similiar scenario happen in my city, kid lost his life cause he was pissed, cop unloaded an entire magazine on him.

... He was not even a threat...

The Shed - June 25, 2018, 7:34 pm

This is the United States, correct? Does not surprise me. Your police officers are under-trained, psychopathic assholes. So, instead of bitching about some kid who wasn't yours being shot in the face, you should instead become a police officer and join them.

Famous Quote, which is actually true in theory and fact: If you can't beat em', you join em'.

Kosmos - June 25, 2018, 7:35 pm

This is what happens when we militarize our police force.

You are not militarizing the police in the states, American. Your government is. You are just a peasant to them, and you should fucking become a police officer. Join them.

Did you happen to read the GDPR agreement page? You need to be 16 or older, otherwise you require mommy's written consent. Troll harder.

This reminds me of when a cop came to my house and went over my gate to knock at my OPENED door 5 feet away to ask me if some random guy who had a warrant on him lived at my house (which he didnt) and my dog barked. The cop pulled his gun and said get him or I will shoot. My dog never left the doorway and was only barking to let me know someone was there. He was the biggest baby ever my dog was. But yeah he was almost shot when that cop jumps my gate to get to my doorway. I also had beware of dogs sign on teh GATE. this video just shows me how bad it could have been and i had a newborn child behind my dog.

It's hard for people to understand the daily stress police officers go through. They're expected to protect and restore order. They undergo situations that normal people do not experience, police officers are just as human as you and I are, and have fear and paranoia. If you see real situations where officers have less than a second to make a life or death decision, you'd understand how unfortunate situations like this happen. With today's society, there's no telling what people will do especially with how people view police officers as a threat to life, you can thank the media for creating the idea. I'm not defending what this officer did as it was wrong, but will hopefully want people to understand that being a police officer is an extremely difficult job and the decisions they make are usually to defend their life or other's.

He was fired after this incident lol

Shorta - June 26, 2018, 1:22 am

This is ufkcing bullshjit, no matter how much cops goes through and shit, this dog did not even harm anyone, all it did was it's job as a dog, if that was an intruder and the dog barked him off or bit him off it'd be a hero.

hahaha biggest and strogest country in the world having these stupid stuff happening daily is just LOL.?

The irony... ?

Not all are. Sometimes suspects bring the officer's full force upon themselves by not doing as they're told. Sometimes, though the police do over-react.

My guess is that the questioner is an American from the language used in the question. The simple fact is that many American police are less well trained than police in other countries, have the most impressive arsenal at their disposal and face the most heavily armed criminals. Thus, it's quite natural for them to shoot too early in a conflict, while other countries' police officers will pursue a peaceful resolution for longer.

That said, some US police forces are much better trained than others. Therefore, where policing is good, the police may behave much more like police in other countries. To put it simply, US police often lack the psychological resources provided by good training and this contributes to the widely held view that they are in the questioner's terms "assholes".

My recommendation is that US police forces should look at police training in Australia, a country that routinely arms its police but tries deescalation strategies before shooting suspects. My knowledge of Australian policing is wholly from fly-on-the-wall documentaries but they have given me the impression of a highly trained, professional force.

It's not just that, a lot of police in America shoot to kill, in the UK our police will always shoot to disarm first.

nah typical cop in usa. i wanted to live there when i was younger cuz you guys are making some good money there but hey, theres milions of videos like this one on internet. and nothing is changing at all. cops feel more entitled to shoot people than [BRAND NAME REMOVED] thots to ghost you

Cyber Coder - June 26, 2018, 4:46 am only in america idiots cops react like this. A dog like that that is not even trained to attack would have been settle down with few kicks , worst case the officer would have gotten 1-2 bites , you dont go into someone`s house and shot the fucking dog trying to protect his owner when is not putting your life in danger, especially with a kid near him ,shitty country where everyone has guns and use them however they want

Why do you have such a condescending tone, my friend? Where is this American resentment coming from?

Not American, I'm Canadian by the way.

I once had armed police aim their handguns at me while I was half dressed eating Kellogg's Coco Pops.

Didn't even let me finish the bowl.

SuperiorUser - June 26, 2018, 4:58 am

it was a clean shooting. the dog was a threat and honestly I'd rather a dog be killed than an officer being harmed, obviously tho the kid was harmed apparently which is no good so the cop will probably get fired. either way I would've loved this to happen to me so I can cash out on all of the tax payers money

It's amazing how you can even defend this officers actions, to be honest, it wasn't a clean shooting the dog suffered only superficial injuries - didn't even die.

by it was a clean shooting I mean It can be fought against in court. but because the kid was harmed tax payers money will go to the family.

What I mean by the growing militarization of our police force is that what is done by our police force goes unnoticed, even the many rotten eggs that overshadow the good cops. Unnoticed by their superiors and then they are not penalized. It happens in the armed forces. The killing of civilians, theft, and ego driven actions such as this.

That dog was just doing his job of protecting the family, like all dogs should do, and the fact that he KNEW that it was a dog and still shot at it is sad. One reason to why I hate police is because they have absolute no fucking brain.

Does anyone know why they were there in the first place? There obviously had to be a reason why they were in the house..

Yeah, they don't have much consideration for the families of the dog, I cried more when my dog was euthanized than I did when my aunt passed away. Dogs really are man's best friend - you can treat them like absolute shit but they will still be loyal as fuck.

It's common for police to kill dogs. Especially a pit bull terrier. Unfortunately. The dog didn't pose much risk in that situation and definitely did not deserve to be shot. Sucks
