Thread: [How I Made \$2,500 in 5 days with Shopify \[method revealed\]](#)

2073436 - June 27, 2018, 11:52 am

No pictures, I couldn't give a fuck if you believed me. Just read it and see for yourself. Thought I'd post this, but I didn't need to. Not intending to brag honestly

I bought a Shopify store from someone on HF for like $250 and made $2.5k in the first 4-5 days of my first time in Shopify

This was back in 2016, July

I still believe this method works to this day, but you need the right contacts.

You shouldn't put lots of effort into your store, all my store had was an About us page, Contact page and obviously the products.

As long as your theme is alright it should be fine. Also, never forget to check how it looks on mobile (crucial)

So with my $250 purchase I also received 2-3 contacts

These were Telegram contacts (almost everyone selling Tweetdeck access has telegram lol)

If you have one contact, you can always talk to them asking if they know someone else (or offer to pay money for other contacts)

My main contact asked me $25 for 7 days access to a Tweetdeck (turned $25 to 100x more lol)

Every 15 minutes I was able to promote my content to millions of people.

I was getting millions of impressions weekly, my content was relatable and people liked what I was selling

My mistake was that I was selling replicas of like Louis Vuitton and all of that, which is obviously illegal but I wasn't aware (I know, stupid..)

FYI, everyone was properly informed these were replicas

What I would suggest is selling caps or accessories that resonate with the audience of your tweetdeck.

Be creative, this thread is rather about one of the many possible traffic sources and not really about guiding you how to set-up your store as this is being explained everywhere on the web

As for the content, all I did was create a Twitter account for my 'brand' and then made like 3-5 posts using emojis, pictures of products that relate and short easy text

E.g. I'd make a tweet with bags from LV or other brands (for women) and I'd use emojis appropriate for that audience (girly emojis)

Use getemoji.com for emojis

Copy images from products on website

Easy to read, not pushing them to purchase. At the end, just be like 'Cop yours here -

www.website.com'

I simply promoted one after the other, nothing special there

The important thing with ads is that you should never try to trick people, just be genuine and honest. That drives most sales

So yeah, I was pushing this out to millions as much as I could. I was able to do $2.5k in under a week.

Bare in mind, not every tweetdeck seller you see will drive you sales. At least, I bought access to a HF member's deck and it didn't work out for me at all Sorry if it looks boring to read, I realize it does LOL ?

Aside from that, a big % of my sales came from influencers.

I can't stress enough how important they can be if you find the right ones

All I did was create coupon codes of like 15% discounts, send them their coupon code and make a deal. They get $X per sale under that coupon code

By talking to people, you can find influencers quite easily. It's all about networking

Hopefully some if you now know how others are able to get successful with this type of stuff, might be interesting to some

The best thing I can recommend is to read about traffic methods and then combine your knowledge - you can create your own special traffic method with that knowledge

FYI, if you're still here. I was able to sell my contacts 1x at $600 and once again at $750

Then I had my own Shopify service on HF which netted me $4,500 in under one week ?

If you made it to here, I've just edited the thread with this bonus

<http://www.sauceapparel.co/>

<https://twitter.com/sauceapparel?lang=en>

This is a perfect example of a brand that made it work with tweetdecks. They were really popular and they were pulling in lots of sales

Whats Tweetdeck,

How can we access it?

And how can we use it?

Do you post something on that and it gets shared to lots of people or what?

Also what about this contacts?

How can we find them etc?

What do they do?

Can you explain more on this please.

Thank you.

A tweetdeck is a deck with X amount of Twitter accounts. You can retweet a post through all of these accounts with a Tweetdeck

Access by logging in

Retweet your tweets to all the accounts' followers

I post on my main account then retweet with the tweetdeck every 10 minutes

Contacts aren't hard to find if you do good networking

They provide you with a tweetdeck

This actually looks legit. Nice, it's more of a spread it a much as possible method. I'm gonna come back to it.

Wow this seems like a great idea and thanks for sharing the tips. Did the store that you bought from HF had any sales prior this?

I don't remember the numbers exactly but it did like $1.5k/week and a few k in total.

Hence why I snatched it up for $250 only

I appreciate you explaining everything and your experiences, I have to say: Congratulations!

One question for you.

I have a long term goal of creating my own merchandise shop, what I'm going to sell - I don't know yet.

My question is how much you would save just to spend for expenses and how I should get my product?

If you look at the market, dropshipping is known to everyone. But I want to get a niche for a specific area instead of being all over the place. What if I wanted a solely legitimate business where the products are actually custom? How would I find my sources and get the best quality for a decent price where I'm to profit?

Look for a company that does most of it for you or find a local supplier (best option, most profit)

I know of one called 'Printful', they cover everything from customizing to shipping. All you do is marketing and get the right designs

If you want custom designs and a nice store + boost your social media coverage then you'll need a couple 100's for sure

Finding a local supplier would be best because they'll be much cheaper, but you'll have to do all the work yourself (shipping, handling, ..)

Might be interesting to some! It's intended for educational purposes

Don't PM me asking for contacts, just read and keep it mind for when you cross into future traffic methods on forums :)

I haven't tried to do it again after this, my PP got limited because of the replicated goods I was selling.

It should be, just be creative and blend in with the culture of your tweetdeck audience

It's just the control panel -- sign in <https://tweetdeck.twitter.com/>

That but with tens of accounts on there, allowing you to retweet your own post from all of them

Buying tweetdeck access is basically buying the login credentials to <https://tweetdeck.twitter.com/>
Once logged in, you search for your post and then retweet it. It'll prompt you asking from which accounts you want to retweet it - you select them all.

It's funny because I used to set a timer every 15mins to click like 150 accounts to share my tweet from. I was getting millions of impressions and that was all I had to do lol

I understand that but I wasn't able to find any way to find anyone selling credentials (?). Can you give me some tips about where to look for?

Look around on forums, do some searching. It's not easy, I know, but that's part of the job

There's no forum called 'buytweetdecks.com' otherwise it'd be too easy

If you earn 2.5K in few days you don't need worrying about selling replicas you can hire lawyers or open company on someone else money protect you from all of this.

Even Stripe is better than that.

And Twitter traffic like this is horrible at converting, you can do the same with Google AdWords, Facebook Ads, and bunch of other methods if you do it right.
With Twitterdecks it's more of a luck factor.

And your sales is only based on a week. Long term you have no clue if it works, or how it's doing now.

And sure.. Train your FB pixel with low quality traffic.

I had a decent EPC. And if I'm not correct, you can place your pixel anywhere (even at check-out) meaning that the quality of the traffic doesn't really matters - it looks at the more specific traffic that converts.

I'm not saying my method is better than paid ads, but it's easier to dive into this than into paid ads as a beginner.

If anything, I'm showing how you can turn traffic sources into revenue and it can be taken as inspiration for beginners. For some reason you want to come and say paid ads is better, quality is low and bla bla. We all know that, you're not coming with anything revolutionary

I'm not advertising anything.. I'm just sharing my experience with my first Shopify run.

Sauceapparel is one of the few brands that use tweetdecks. They had a good run, and it was successful back in the day. I haven't been doing stuff related to this in like 2 years, so I haven't been keeping track of all the brands and shit.

Google analytics doesn't have to be a big part.

Google analytics doesn't have to be a big part. Google Analytics is pretty much a requirement to use AdWords and to do SEO.
