Congratulations! That's a great achievement.

but

Do you want to work a job for the rest of your life? Waste 8 hours a day building someone else's business or do you want to be financially free and have no worries about money at all. I can't understand how you can be happy with knowing you're going to be enslaved for the next 40 years of your life. I'm not trying to ruin your day, but fuck 9 to 5! Be an entrepreneur! - That's my personal opinion don't bitch about it.

Lol, how can you make such a loaded statement and say "don't bitch about it"?

You think that you are smart and original by encouraging someone to be their own boss -- guess what? Plenty have tried and they have failed. Do you know why? Because they go into it thinking the same stupid way as you are, "just do it". You need a plan, a strategy. Your reply makes it look like you can easily become a self-made millionaire overnight, without any form of prior planning.

Don't become a teacher, usually the ones who can't get a proper job as a software developer due to lack of skills become a teacher. You don't even get paid that much.

Who said I think you can do it overnight? I know it's hard. And it's long. I've been through it. In fact, it's HELL! But at the end you get through it if you stick with it. And because of people thinking like you do (always using excuses for example how 90% of businesses fail, many people fail..), that's why you don't succeed.

And what makes you think that I think I'm original? I got inspired by people who did this WAYYY before me.

I work 9-5 and I'm fucking loaded. Got a big job, because I didn't go out there and think I'm something special.

Most entrepreneurs fail and lose loads of money....

I love to teach it's less stress and overall a better working environment in my opinion

I feel less stressed and I love doing it

There are also benefits if you are a teacher

22 hours giving lectures, full time paycheck (2419 euro's as a starter so the pay isn't bad).

We also have a lot of vacation.

Teaching things is for me more rewarding then a software developer or an IT infrastructure specialist.

do you not have to spend another 1-2years getting a teacher credential tho? I know I have to after I graduate with my bachelors in mathematics education

You're 0.1% of the net worth of the people you work for. How much do you have in your bank account? 50K? That's loaded? ?

If you really want to become a teacher then I'd still recommend you to first get some experience in the real workfield before teaching.
Because that's what most teachers nowadays lack. They have no experience in the workfield which causes them to teach students the wrong way of programming & communication. ?

(Unless you already have experience in the field)

The bachelors degree is my teacher credential.
I can legally give all subjects on high school level but I'm specialized in the STEM fields
Engineering and Technology

I'm from Belgium

I'm planning on working both as a teacher and in the workfield. This isn't my first bachelors degree my previous bachelors degree was in Computer Sciences.

I think you're the one who is small minded.

Go back to smoking your weed, that'll fucking get you somewhere in life mate. You're exactly like a fucking typical person who smokes weed all day long, and your name solidifies this theory.

You're all for big ideas, big companies and million dollar deals. Everyone starts somewhere, I may work a job all day but I also own properties and have several small projects/investments, you need something to keep yourself steady, people who go all out of these things are just stupid.

I'm sorry. But you have no idea what you're talking about. It's the truth. You don't. I like to occasionally smoke a bowl here and there. That makes me less successful than you? You have no idea what you're talking about. I'm no going to claim my success because frankly, you wouldn't believe me. You're the type of person who get's high of arguing, always searching for arguments. A lot of stubborn people like that in the insurance business.

I agree with your claim that everyone starts somewhere. You're right about that. That's why I give such respect to people who came from lower status than me and still made it (I was born middle class).

Haha sorry if I offended you. I don't work in the insurance business and have no interest in that. I work in cyber security, but you have absolutely no idea what you're talking about. Ask any entrepreneur who isn't high on cocaine and you will heard "start from the bottom". Going out there and risking everything is stupid. Go ahead and do it, but it pisses me off that I have to work hard to become successful and then pay taxes so idiots who took stupid risks can sit on their asses all day and taking drugs using my tax money. Keep dreaming!

I know what you're going through. Everyone who made it has been there. We don't take stupid risks, we don't throw our money into something and get lucky. Our risks are calculated, sometimes they fail, but we work towards winning more times than losing. When I was like you, I probably would have said some bs like that on a forum. I hated successful people for some reason, and, even now I have no idea why. But then one time during my shower sesh I had an epiphany, and I realized that is the reason I'm not successful. That day I got so pissed I went to our local business (customized furniture) and told the secretary I need to speak to the CEO (because it was a very small company). She denied, so I said it's life-threatening. Long story short, next day evening I met with him and I said: "You don't know me, but if you teach me what you know, I will work for you for free". And of course, he began mentoring me on business the very next day. The reason I'm writing this is because I can see you're a very smart guy, and I don't want people like that wasting their time away. Your intelligence will get you far, with the right mindset. Hopefully, I made some sense.

Didn't intend to make it look like I'm trying to make people quit their jobs. The only message I want to spread is the belief in capitalism. I think this world would be a much better place with more entrepreneurs.
