Thread: Are there any Free Av scanning site which does not Distribute Samples?

VisualSoft - July 2, 2018, 9:37 am

I have been Back after Long time and I see the Scanning Site I used to scan files are not working any more.

I saw some sites but they are charging like 10$/week !

Is there any free site which allows scanning and does not distribute samples or give few free scans per day.

I tried Googling and could not find any good site.

Go to <https://antiscan.me/login> use auth key DEMO for free scans.

Buy the service if you like it :)

Works great, sometimes the balance is 0 but then you have to wait some time(some hours)

I dont wish to wait!

I believe there is a thread here on HF that proved it.

You can scan files from your own PC?

You know just a simple google dork can bring home the point in google search

Quote:"result" site:nodistribute.com

You will find multiple results which you can look at, how is that secure? How is that not distributing results? Let's say that the file isn't being distributed absolute best case scenario, the sha256 hash is there.. what prevent's an AV maker from scraping these sha256 hashes and adding them? Of course if they get the file it'd be nice since now they can start developing more IOCs.

I guess NoDistribute also went down at the same time as viruscheckmate did (the nodistribute site for sure is working but the scanner is down as they use Viruscheckmate's API)

I am making a free crypter for HF so I need a scanner where the users of my crypter can scan.

In this case your OPSEC will be of utmost importance, you figure that within the first week your detection rates will jump up significantly due to mass usage and mass spreaders. I really would say VM multiple AV's and multiple snapshots for each of those solutions, and also off of the internet, as to prevent upload of payloads in case of detection to AV makers.
