Thread: LTC \(Join the LTC Revolution!\)

I need opinions and speculations as to why this coin will rise, rise, and rise. I remember it being BTC's right hand man back in 2014. Any sources you guys can provide as to why this coin is good or bad and what you think it will hit by the end of 2018? End of 2020? I used to have 8 Litecoin bought at $35 USD back in the day and made the foolish mistake of gambling it! Let me know guys ?

LiteCoin will pump very hard after this bear market. But then again pretty much everything will once the capital starts coming in.

I'll make it simple.

Litecoin, who cares?

I agree, I sold all mine before the drop.

In my opinion, LTC was a great alternative to send funds instead using BTC because of its (Speed confirmation & low costs) but now that BTC has normalized itself and with the Lightning Network I don't see an reason to keep using Litecoin honestly. Also the founder of LTC has left the project and sold his coins although he is still active.

this. it's rather a shitcoin tbh, other better tech out there with promising future. it's a good coin to pump in dump tho, i've made some good money off it but it's not something worth holding onto for years to come.

I feel like its to late to join the LTC train for me. so i just let everyone else ride it.

Coinbase added LTC and it got a solid pop from it. However, they keep adding coins making LTC not the only BTC alternative to use there. That diminishes the value. Also LTC doesn't really have a lot of real capabilities other than being BTC's test environment.

Unless Litecoin actively works to create partnerships to advance usage I don't see how it can go anywhere. I suppose it will always exist and have a utility but there are just so many better blockchains to use.
