Seemed like a forced emotional ending, in my opinion. There wasn't a consistent build up—or heart-racing climax—that had us holding our breaths. The release would naturally make our emotions run high and become uncontrollable, but we were not given that. Instead, we were given a faux-happy ending that did not explain many of the plot holes. We were spoon-fed this “joyful” ending. I didn't feel a rush from it because there wasn't a meaningful climax.

Do not be deceived by the cliches and tearful, happy music.

Didn't see the thread for some reason since OP is on my ignore list. Also, the thread isn't really focused on discussing the last episode.
