A-

Let me convince you to watch one of the most pivotal movies of the 21st Century. This movie basically has a boy named Gordo, who is moving away from home to be a animator. He moves to Hollywood and gets a job as a worker in a cheese factory to foot the bill while he is trying to get a foot in the door at an animation studio as his dream is to have a TV show based on his "X-Ray Cat".

Gordo is a mentally challenged skateboarder, farmer, deer, scuba diver, backwardsman, doctor, investment banker and a butcher. He loves a girl in a wheelchair and he has an abusive father. He loves Horses and Elephants.

Basically this movie is about finding your way while you deal with discrimination in the every day world. Tom Green brings the character Gordo to life in a role many would consider the next "Forrest Gump". This is an outstanding movie and I highly recommend it.

Here are some gifs of the movie.

I haven't seen this yet, but it looks like it falls into the same category of "it's bad but it's actually good" like Dude, Where's My Car? or some shit like that

Going onto my download list

I've seen the "Daddy, would you like some sausages?" part before. Didn't know where it was from.

It's not on Netflix, though.

Lol that movie is fucking hilarious... When his friend breaks his leg and he starts licking the extruding bone.

Fucking hell if that was my kid I would have just shot him.

Absolutely funny ! I've downloaded it after a wikipedia article about the "ugliest movies" but I've laught my ass off.

Very provocative and politically incorrect. Pratically a movie made by 4chan.
