Thread: In what position do you surf the web?

?elevision - July 20, 2018, 11:20 am

Surfing the web, we all do it, but we all also do it differently. There are many positions to surf the web. One may invest into a gaming chair to use for their PC, while another may be at a coffee shop on their laptop. How do you surf the web? Are you sitting, standing, laying down? Thank you for reading, and have a wonderful day guys.

Well... I change position so often because my back hurts, I've done positions you can't even imagine.

I surf the web sideways. I get much better results.

simple chair, or a recliner with the laptop. Been thinking about getting a gaming PC, my current chair kills my back.

I have a comfy gaming/office chair.

I got a dxracing chair recently which was kinda overpriced, although I'm still using the desk I've had for 5 years lol.

I developed a room for my internet world since my job requires to have a silent environment around you.

I have a super small room where I'm living right now, so I purchased this thing in order to not have to buy a super tiny desk. Now I just sit on my bed and browse the web, code, and play games. Better than I thought it would be.

If I'm monging at home I'm usually horizontal on the sofa, but can get a sore shoulder bingeing on netflix.

TB12 - July 20, 2018, 4:08 pm

I reverse cowgirl the internet
