Thread: Responsive Theme

Omniscient - July 20, 2018, 1:54 pm

iHydra, Xerotic, and myself will be working on the responsive theme for HF over the next few weeks.

We're at the point where it's #1 on the todo list.

r00t is released
mysp is installed
contracts are updated

We've done a lot these past few months. Next big job is the theme.

I actually plan on using the theme started by Phixel. I like how it's simple and I think we'll be able work from it. You can still view it at Knotbb (set as default theme).

<https://knotbb.com>

The tabs work and it passes the Google Mobile Friendly Test. There is still work to get done for the custom pages and some fine-tuning on pages like usercp. But overall it's not that far from being installed here. We'll run it on HF as a secondary theme in about a week. Then we'll alter it so that all the extra pages HF has functions as needed. Once it's working as we need it then I will make it the default theme and the old theme will no longer be available. I am not a fan of running more than one theme. It's just too much work for updating and customizing.

Oh btw, one big change will be that the forum threads will display in classic postbit only. It will be easier to use that for a responsive theme than the horizontal postbit.

Special thanks to iHydra for taking on this mission. In case you don't know who iHydra is....

Thank you.

Looks decent , waiting for it.

TB12 - July 20, 2018, 1:56 pm

This is fantastic news! Thank you all for your hard work, excited to finally see the theme soon.

iNuke - July 20, 2018, 1:59 pm

Man I can not wait! What a time to be alive! Thanks for all the major updates that previously released and that are coming soon.

Meow - July 20, 2018, 2:08 pm

It looks awesome, very minimalistic & modern.

Would it be possible to make a few color options for the theme or let members input their own color

#? Maybe it's too much to ask but I think that members would love to set their own color for the theme, instead of using purple one.

Vitani - July 20, 2018, 2:12 pm

This is going to be awesome. I'm glad it's now the top priority to get this done. Hopefully after this is fully completed and implemented we'll see some increase in new users, due to google classifying HF as mobile friendly.

You mentioned you're going to enforce classic postbit because it's easier. If it has to be done then I understand, but if it's possible to keep the alternative, do look into it!

I never used classic postbit on HF, I much prefer the horizontal postbit and I think most users do. If it's not possible we'll just have to adjust, but if there's a possibility I hope it stays in one way or another.

Frankey - July 20, 2018, 2:20 pm

Look's awesome. I would definitely prefer that theme over the current HF one.

I've always used horizontal post bits, at least from what I can remember so that won't be a problem. I hope that the users who do not use the horizontal function won't be starting a rally again, which some users did when their reputation got reset (or when the market ratings where released.)\

Edit: Ignore everything above(Except of the looks awesome part.), I clearly can't read any text in English.

Ditto. Never liked Classic postbit, but I guess many of us will have to manage, in case, horizontal postbits doesn't get implemented.

The theme looks decent though.

I think, Omni meant that horizontal postbits will be removed and the vertical/classic (your name, badge etc on the left vertically of a post) will be enforced.

I've used it for 30 minutes now (shorter I think..). I got used to it pretty quick looks really good when an user has a lot of awards :P I can definitely use this in the future.

Reisk - July 20, 2018, 3:11 pm

Can you at least change the background to: #202020 - I don't think you should ever use 'black' for web design.

I don't like giving members theme control.

Have you tried classic postbit lately? It looks better. I find threads much easier to read and profiles have their info all in one place.

Exactly. The horizontal postbit has user info on both sides. That's clunky. And as you scroll to read a thread you aren't interrupted by member data.

Hydra - July 20, 2018, 5:28 pm

Can't wait for a mobile-ready theme to go live. I'll finally be able to use HF on my phone without zooming in on everything :D

I'm a fan of Classic Postbit style. I used to hate it till I tried it 2 months ago and I've been using it since. It's much better when reading posts and scrolling thru threads. Award layout is better, it's organized in one section instead of split left and right.

Sounds like a lot of work. You'd probably have to redo most of the CSS. The HTML skeleton has been modified as well for some pages so you'll have that common rush of lag when things change after 'document-ready' because you'll have to jS that too. Won't be an ideal experience tbh.

Trying it out now. Is there a way that you can shrink the vertical size of posts with classic postbit? It appears quite a bit larger and only allows a max of 2 posts to be on screen at any given time (1080p / 27-inch monitor). I'd even be fine with shrinking signature sizes a bit if needed just to shrink down the vertical sizing. I know that certainly would not be ideal though and certainly not a popular decision.

If it's a bother you can disable signatures.

I'm not sure why the tabs are placed on the side on mobile, but I would 100% recommend keeping them at the top.

It'd be much much better than having them on the side, taking up unnecessary space (in my opinion).

Because HF has 10 tabs. You can't fit them all on the top in mobile.

I'd say one of these solutions is better than having them on the side:

- Convert all tabs into a native dropdown/select (on mobile)
- Make the tabs overflow horizontally, so you can scroll through without losing vertical screen estate

Just my 2 cents. I don't think I would ever like having tabs on the side, placed below each other in any situation/on any screen size.

Right I always thought that a sidebar with a hamburger button containing the tabs (on mobile view) would be pretty neat.

No, Omni stated it will be the only option. It's a better experience anyways, you'll get used to it. All the popular forum softwares (IPB, etc) use that layout.

The only reason I use it on other forums is because I have to.. I've hated that design since I first saw it. At least HF won't have the shitty user profiles... I guess I can take solace in that fact.

EDIT: Better is subjective. Personally I don't like that design.

Fair enough. Pardon me for asking, but what exactly is "responsive design"? I've heard that phrase thrown around a lot but with no real meaningful answers.

Responsive designs dynamically adjust based on the width of the device's screen. For example, if you have a grid of 4 blocks in one row: on a desktop, all 4 will be in 1 row as they fit. On a phone, instead of scrolling to the right to see the 2 blocks cut off (smaller width), the design wraps/pushes the 2 blocks down to a new row below. That's a very basic example. A more advanced example is the ability to modify the layout of a page per device: mobile, tablet, desktop. Hide certain things for mobile or reduce font-size, etc.

#1 reason for this theme change is to meet Google's requirement of mobile-ready. Read this: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5851032>

I've been using the classic postbit for a few days now, to get adjusted to it. I like that the posts are closer to each other. I still prefer the horizontal postbit though. It just looks better, like something only HF has. I'll miss it.

That aside though, it's easy enough to adjust to classic postbit. It definitely has it's advantages.

Omni was working on a new theme to replace Modern Blue and people complained about it and it drove him to the point to say fuck it. Theme was really good too. Looked a lot like HF from back in the day.

He forced everyone to use Modern Blue for awhile until he came up with the current black matte theme HF has at the time of this writing 8-3-18.
