Thread: xx 0x0 xx uid=955481 "Hacking Mentor" | Scamming, disappearing, now back for more "

Brill - July 30, 2018, 1:50 pm

I purchased a mentorship with this user in preparation for my OSCP exam. This user is taking peoples money for a 'hacking course' and running off after the first 'lesson'. The only 'lesson' he ever provided was him typing to me for 30 minutes about what MySQL was and how to set it up (LOL)

Here is his current thread: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5521243>

I don't really care if I get a refund or not since it's been like 4 months since he disappeared, just yesterday he sent me a message telling me to get on skype. here are the messages he sent me.

I wasn't going to make a community alert but because I believe he's here to scam some more and he told me I should make it, so consider the wish granted. I also do not want to see more people get ripped off by this moron.

Here are the longer messages that got cut off.

This is the message from 7:03 in the above screenshot:

This is the message from 7:07 in the above screenshot:

I added an extra message in that screenshot to show you the dates between messages and proof of discord tag as needed for the messages between us further down this thread.

My co-existing responses are in reverse order than you will see in the screenshot above due to no option to look up "sent" messages by "sender", so, with that said, read the screenshot above from bottom to top (starting at "yesterdays" messages, and these messages top to bottom.

My responses (Click to View)

Here are screenshots from discord around the same time the first messages in the screenshot of his PMs to me were (when we started the 'mentorship')

This forum isn't for deal disputes. Additionally this wouldnt be a valid dispute because no contract was used

I did read that, but it's obviously a deal dispute. It's a complaint about a specific deal.

it's a complaint about a specific person who is running the same scam. use your head bud. you serve no purpose posting on this thread, go back to begging for pennies
