Thread: How can I make private dorks for SQLi?

n1gh7howl3r - August 9, 2018, 10:13 pm

I've been searching for dorks to work for SQLi on google. But they dosen't seem to be helpful ? . i've tried for a couple of dorks and found many sites to be messed up by hackers. And thus I'm unable to find vulnerable sites to be exploited. So now I'm wondering how can I make private dorks whom I can find useful ?

Thanks In Advance.

Probably because you're digging up a thread from 2018

Most 2018 threads are still packaged as 2019 so most times after search you still get the same answer...

Read up on how google dorks work as well as SQLi, your username speaks for itself

Just try stuff like filetype:php inurl:&

then search for params that are vulnerable to SQLi, for example if as a result of the above google dork you found something called example123.php?lol=1 then follow up with inurl:example123.php and see if other sites have the same vulnerable file..
