Thread: Don't buy from Kuldar, faking screenshots.

He's faking screenshots.

Look at this:

Look at the number in the paypal account, PP always puts it up like this (, and . may vary depending where you live): $2,574.94.

Paypal never shows it like how it is in he's screenshot.

Thread (the screenshot above is in case he edits the thread):

On European accounts, there is a comma instead of dot.

However, I have never seen balance without both so yes, this is probably fake.

Also, do you guys remember OG paypal:

Thank you for the warning OP .

He all but admits it in his thread. Saying it's not against forum policy to fake proofs for your sales threads lol.

It's almost meme worthy how rampant the fraud is here.

Meteorlol - August 15, 2018, 5:55 pm

Imao so he admitted to fake proofs, very misleading.

It's almost meme worthy how rampant the fraud is here. Only thing I said was that I haven't done anything against the forum policy.

Heads up

After being called out for faking proofs, he's now abusing the rep system.

Abusing rep system? You are accusing me of scamming customers! I've never scammed any member! Did you expect green apples from sales trashing?

I asked you to address the issue timo brought up about faking earning proofs.

You all but admitted the screenshots were faked when you said it wasn't against forum policy to do so.

What you're doing is the real word definition of a scam. You're attempting to defraud customers with the promise of financial incentives that simply don't exist. If they did, your earning proofs wouldn't be faked.

Then in an attempt to discredit the community alert, you chose the only person without rep to attack. You're actually pathetic.

Name me a single member who got scammed.

What's with the unnecessary drama?

Just answer this question:

Is the screenshot altered, yes or no?

All I have to say is, that it serves illustration purpose only, it's irrelevant to the method I am selling. If I didn't have the thread edit limits, I would remove that "problematic" screenshot to avoid all that needless drama and snowflaking. If you think that something is false then stick to your argument and do not jump to conclusions. Otherwise, it's just harassment and sales trashing.

?lex - August 16, 2018, 2:25 pm

99% of e-book sellers fake their PayPal funds. I am not defending this user but it is what it is. If you're gonna expose someone, at least go and expose everyone.

You keep avoiding the question.

Is the screenshot altered, yes or no?

And that's utter BS, the screenshot serves to convince people that you made a lot of money from this method, so that they would buy this method.

I didn't know this user before this thread.

I saw he's sales thread and couldn't believe that one wouldn't even be capable of faking proof.

If I see more screenshots like this (that are clearly edited) I will post a thread about it.
