Thread: Heading to San Diego soon any tips?

Zexo - August 18, 2018, 7:35 pm

Will be heading to San Diego for a week and a half to spend time with my gf. Anyone have any suggestions on fun places to go? We have some things in mind but open to more.

Thanks

If you are into nature you got Lake Cuyamaca, really nice place and great for camping. Umm Point Loma is really awesome on the drive up you see a large military cemetery looking over San Diego Harbor. Coronado is real nice too don't go after it rains, avoid Imperial Beach at all costs, because sewage from TJ is all over after a big storm. The Air and Space Museum is nice too. If you all are looking for a nice beach check out Mission Beach bring your shoes very sharp rocks there, Ocean Beach is awesome. Umm Fisherman's Landing is great you can go for a half day or take a 3 day to Baja, it's really awesome. Of course the zoo and seaworld are there and lego land too. Star of India is really cool also they got great restaurants around there.

I've been to Cali a couple times for some festivals, but not really San Diego so I'm not much help here.

Me personally, I've always wanted to go to the San Diego Zoo because I hear it's just a spectacular exhibit and want to eventually go there myself!

Good luck with your vacation and I hope everything works out for ya brother!

Go to mission bay pier and do some fishing off the pier.
Best fishing i have experienced.

EDIT: also watch out for the Sea Gals.
They like to steal your bait.

Haha I live in Austin so we have a couple in and outs here but I've heard they taste better in Cali so I'll hit them up.

Thank you everyone for all the suggestions. Big help

Something else in the gas lamp district the yellow marked curb iirc you can park there at night .. you want to double check that because that's from 1996.

If you like tacos, go eat Mexican Food. The place is called 'Vallarta's Express'. They have the BEST California burritos/fries.

If you don't like mexican food, then I guess San Diego Zoo (it's huge) or the beaches.
