Thread: I think I have OCD but small one

Account of the Gods - August 21, 2018, 10:54 pm

its hard to explain

do you have ocd when you want everything perfect?

i often move hands like if I have ADHD but i think thats habbit from drinking 6 coffees daily, and not OCD that being said i think i have OCD.

but not a big one. im really focused on always finding the easier way to deal with something, witch is my countermeasure to OCD (because OCD in this case would tryhard one way for 30 days instead of changing the plans for something easier)

Like I want something Even.

Like an even number. Maybe when I tap my foot, I feel like I have to do it twice.

I have an OCD for the way you type things like 'It's', 'I' and can't start sentences with capitals. It's pretty infuriating really.

You often move hands like you have ADHD? ADHD isn't anything like OCD, one is an attention deficit hyperactivity disorder - one is an obsessive compulsive disorder. One basically causes people to have issues concentrating due to hyperactivity in the brain while the other causes you to obsess over something extremely seriously to the point in some people it will causes anxiety/panic attacks. This could be as simple as scratching your nose with one hand but it not being symmetrical so you have to do it with the other.

I'm not a professional or anything but I would have to diagnose you with Autism and/or be near either end on the side of Asperger syndrome.

Ah you're back to being salty. I was simply pointing out actual facts about your behaviour and social media status offsite.

I've been asleep the last 4-5 hours so i'm not here to battle/argue with you, simply answering your thread. Don't take Autism/Asperger as an offensive statement, many users on here are on the spectrum. It's clear that you are and that's fine - we can help you learn to empathise with people a little bit better over time and we can show some leniency to the types of posts you make regarding it.

Your definition of SM is clearly outdated and misinformed but again leniency for autism, I'll restrain from destroying you again and again as it's completely unfair to attack someone with such a mentally unstable way of thinking.

All the best OP.
