Thread: Looking for a Experienced RUST Cheat Developer to work with. meemsquad - August 22, 2018, 6:01 am

Good evening all,

Hopefully this is in the right place, anyways i'm looking for a Cheat developer that can code a RUST Experimental Cheat from scratch. Not copy pasting 85% of the code. If you were to work with me you would be developing a cheat for RUST that uses EAC (Easy Anti Cheat) You should know about kernel drivers, bypassing EAC etc. I am not one to know about these kind of things but I do know that you need a good bypass etc. to get past EAC as they scan memory every 8-10 hours of game time. If the cheat was functional, you would be paid 50% of what is made from each subscription. ($75 each new customer first time payment then $25 p/month after) I will be handling the forum, advertising and media part of the cheat and you would be the back end worker. (You would be known as Developer etc. on the forums if you wish.)

TL:DR: I am looking for a developer that can code a bypass and a undetected RUST Experimental Cheat. You would get paid half for each paying client and get the same permissions as I would on the forums etc.

Contact,

DISCORD: Exliation#0666

EDIT: The coding language would be C++

This offer is laughable. It's also posted in the wrong section. No sane cheat developer would work with you and here's why

- (1) You want a 50% cut and will be doing what I'd consider low-skill labor
- (2) You will be controlling the forum and be the end-point customer contact
- (3) You will handle sales and license (hence no way to see if you're scamming or ability to set price for the product).

As someone whose developed cheats for games and bypassed EAC, BattlEye, and tons of other anticheats in the past: Nobody will give you more than a 20% cut for your role (20% is on the high end, I've given 5%-10% in the past for your same role, and only when they had their own website and large customer base, plus it wasn't exclusive to only them), and that would only be if you already have an existing website with a large existing customer base (200 or so customers ready to buy the cheat). And even then, the cheat developer would be the one to handle licensing. The cheat developer can do your job by himself trivially. Why does he need you? He doesn't. You need him.

I'm also guessing you'd want access to the source code (since you make demands that it has to be 85% unique, must be C++) which is hilarious itself (So I guess it's okay to copy paste 15% of the code? Haha). You may as well just open a thread begging people to give you money, which you'd probably have more success with.

If person is capable of coding game cheat of himself he does not need you, lmao.

You mean the only worker in a team of one person, with a guy trying to take a cut off the top?

SnapJizz - August 23, 2018, 9:49 pm

yes as someone asked above why the fuck anyone need you u literally bring nothing to the table.

Yeah, I do agree with you on that. At the time i thought what i would be doing would be somewhat of a help towards someone wanting to sell their cheat and to anyone that would want to sell there software with me would get an 85% cut of every purchase or donation they would have equal rights as me (owner of anything im owner of etc.) Just to make it clear, I would do everything with the forums whether that be setting up member groups, the e-commerce etc. and any sought of advertisement. The developer would have accsess to anything that i would have access to (which would be expected.)
