

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: How to breach XFINITY/Comcast emails after new policy?

Hoped - August 22, 2018, 10:38 am

They added a new policy where you have to be connected to their internet to reset the pass, before all you needed was a SSN/address/full name which is very ez to get.

anyone know how

Godsome - August 24, 2018, 8:30 am

I am not sure but I have a ton of Xfinity usernames and passwords available if interested

CyberStrike - August 24, 2018, 8:53 am

(Aug 22, 2018 10:38 AM)Hoped Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) They added a new policy where you have to be connected to their internet to reset the pass, before all you needed was a SSN/address/full name which is very ez to get.

anyone know how

Not sure why you need to "breach" an email account over a password reset. I had something similar on my old internet provider (xfinity) they pretty much now were hosting my email, of course a rather catastrophic incident occurred after the move and password was MIA backups in boxes. So this is what happened:

They wanted me to have service with then of course they were not anywhere near where I moved to anyhow after talking with tech support they were able to reset the password. It was pretty painless.

<https://www.xfinity.com/support/articles/using-email-only>

Worst case I am sure you got a buddy with xfinity, I considered doing that if tech support didn't want or couldn't or wouldn't do that, of course if you just moved across country that isn't so feasible, talk with a supervisor if you need to. Hope this helps, they were pretty understanding when I had to do this.