They pester you to pay, and then if you don't pay, sell the debt to a third party debt collector. But I don't think it would come to that, over $79

I've had a few accounts go negative and never had a debt collection occur. You'll be okay, just make a new PayPal (or if you want to keep that one, deposit/receive the money to cover the negative)

Nothing will happen unless they want to make an example out of you.

So if I was negative $500 on PayPal and I just open a new one (new IP but same name) I should be fine?

You'd get asked to pay it. You'd get letters, calls, and debt collectors at your house (presuming you don't bother paying it back at all, or replying to their calls/letters)

It would also for sure affect your credit score.

If you haven't verified the SSN and ID you're Gucci I think. However, I'd remove your details from that account
