Thread: Receiving PayPal payments without a PayPal account \(payment processors\)

Vossen - August 31, 2018, 1:28 pm

I had no idea where to post this otherwise, so excuse me for that.

I own a company on the Seychelles, therefore an IBC. Unfortunately, PayPal isn't really a friend of off-shore companies, especially when it comes to such IBCs from e.g. the Seychelles, British Virgin Islands, Belize and so on. Opening a PayPal account while maintaining the anonymity I opened the Seychelles company for is nearly impossible.

Basically the only option would be to open an account through a fake name and withdrawing the PayPal balance to the VISA card of my off-shore account. But as I do have negative experiences with such things (still got over $4k stuck in PayPal limitations), I'd prefer not to.

So. I thought of using an external payment processor, something like Rocketr or Selly. With the addition, that I do not have to add my own business PayPal account (which does not exist) but the payment processor itself receives the PayPal payments for me, adds it to my balance on their site and I can then withdraw it onto a bank account (or even crypto, idc). I just want to bypass opening a PayPal account on my own for the company as that would mean losing my anonymity for that company.

So, any recommendations? I've seen payment processors like this, so I do know they exist, but I'm looking for recommendations on which of them is the most used one. I've seen 2co / 2checkout mentioned quite often in regards to a Seychelles IBC. Anyone who knows about this payment processor?

Seems like a promising answer, saving this for later.

I checked G2A Pay.

But it seem very difficult to get verified as a Merchant.

Yeah, G2APay have a few requirements. I've contacted them in the past, and from what I remember, they need the following;

Company bank statements. Full company name listed in the footer. Your full details (so you wouldn't be able to remain anonymous to them). And a few more things that I can't remember.

Have you had any luck finding a solution?

Not what I was looking for really, no. Currently in the process of setting up another off-shore company, Limited somewhere in the EU, using a trustee for my anonymity. This way I should be able to use PayPal directly.
