Thread: Po box listed as current address any way to find the physical address?

So I've come up with a po box/rental mailbox is there a way to find the physical address linked to that box? Not the address of the store where the box is.

When you register a P.O box you're required to provide your I.D. If for whatever reason authorities want to find your home address, it'd be fairly easy.

Thank you for the answer but that's the authorities, I was asking if there was a way to find out from another method

I've never heard of anyone doing this but you can try to SE the post office where the PO Box is located. You can claim that you are a private investigator or something similar. You can also try to work around it by sending them a letter in the mail and create a reason for them to send you a letter back including their address. That's a bit of a stretch but if you have no other option it might work out.

One way I used to do this was I would claim to send an unauthorized item thats not allowed in a PO box such as pounds of raw steak and they would get mad if you kept claiming you would come to leave the meat, eventually they would feel pressured and annoyed and give you the proper address to take the meat to, it's all about using psychology to your advantage. Still works to this day btw.

That's pretty clever, I'm gonna give that a try. ?
